WILSON DEFIES WALL ST.

Says He Is "Fearless Man Who Means Exactly What He Says"

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—In reply to stories of unsettled conditions in Wall street and threatened panic published in some of the New York morning newspapers, President-elect Wilson today authorized his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, to issue a statement calling attention to the fact that there was nothing in his Chicago speech or his various other speeches delivered since the election that differs from the views he expressed before the election. The statement follows.

"Attempts are being made to make an issue of Governor Wilson's speech at Chicago. This is nothing less than amusing. Governor Wilson's attitude on business and its relations to the government, as expressed in his several speeches since the election, is, as any well-informed person in the country would testify, exactly the same as his attitude before his nomination and before his election.

"Every word that Governor Wilson has uttered is in complete harmony with the principles to which he has strictly adhered throughout his public career. If there is any surprise at this attitude it can be manifested only by those who fail to realize that the country has elected to the presidency an honest and fearless man, who means exactly what he says."

Mr. Wilson was not alarmed by the Wall Street stories. He seemed amused at them. The statement followed reports that Wilson would have something to say in reply to the stories of Wall Street hostility.

NEW RUSE BY MELLEN ON BOATS

A Canadian corporation which will operate the steamship lines now owned or controlled by the New Haven Railroad is Charles S. Mellen's plan for complying with the new law forbidding railroads to own steamship lines, according to information in the possession of the AMERICAN.

This corporation is already in existence. It is the Boston & Yarmouth Steamship Company, Limited, of Montreal, and it has just taken over the Yarmouth division of the Eastern Steamship Company.

Notification of the authority of the Canadian company has been sent around to all the shippers, and those who know are awaiting developments.

The career of the Yarmouth Line has been very exciting. Six months ago it was the Dominion Atlantic Line, with three fine steamers—the Prince George, Prince Arthur and the Boston, flying the British flag and offering the prettiest kind of competition to the Eastern Steamship Company's International division, and refusing to get together and fix rates.

On September 1 the Eastern Steamship Company announced that it had acquired the Dominion Atlantic Line between Boston and Yarmouth. The notice was signed by O. H. Taylor, passenger traffic manager, Pier 14, North River, New York, and by H. H. Cudworth, general passenger agent, India Wharf, Boston.

Complete Monopoly.

This gave the New Haven's Eastern steamship interests a complete passenger and freight monopoly to Southern Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, since the Boston & Maine and Maine Central railroads are controlled by the New Haven.

Accordingly, there was great surprise when the Boston & Yarmouth Steamship Company came into prominence as the owner of the Yarmouth Line.

In the words of the announcement:

"Attention is respectfully called to the within notice of adoption by this company of passenger tariffs, rules, notices, conveniences heretofore vested in the Eastern Steamship Company."

And signed to the bottom of this Canadian company's circulars were the names of O. H. Taylor, passenger traffic manager, North River, New York City, and H. H. Cudworth of India wharf, Boston.

It will occur to most persons last North River, New York, is a queer headquarters for the manager of a Montreal corporation operating between New York and Boston, and also strange that Mr. Taylor and Mr. Cudworth stress up their jobs with the Eastern Steamship Company to work for the Canadians.

What Cudworth Says.

The AMERICAN called up Mr. Cudworth and found him by getting the Eastern Steamship Company's number.

"The Boston & Yarmouth Steamship Company, Limited, is a Montreal corporation that owns the Yarmouth Line, which the Eastern Steamship Company operates.

"Are you the general passenger agent of either or both of these companies?"

"Of both."

"Has the Yarmouth Line been sold to the Canadian Company?"

"No. It has always owned it."

"How about the Dominion Atlantic Line?"

"That was taken over by the Boston & Yarmouth."

"Then why did the Eastern Steamship Company announce that it had secured the Dominion line?"

"Well, I think you had better see the vice-president. These details are very confusing," said Mr. Cudworth.

Vice-President Jones of the Eastern Steamship Company could not be located.

Induct Donahue as First Democratic Secretary of State

Frank J. Donahue, the first Democrat elected Secretary of State in the history of Massachusetts, was inducted into office at noon today in the chamber of the Executive Counsel. A few minutes later he took charge of the office, succeeding A. P. Langtry of Springfield.

Governor Foss administered the oath of office in the presence of Lieutenant-Governor Walsh, the members of the Council and a number of prominent men. At the same time State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens of Somerville, and Attorney General James M. Swift of Fall River—who were reelected—were sworn into office. Auditor White was detained at his home by illness.

Secretary Donahue received a large number of floral tributes from friends all over the State. After the formal ceremony he was kept busy receiving the congratulations of friends.

Immediately after assuming office, Secretary Donahue notified Captain Isaac N. Edgett, chief deputy, of his intention to retire him on a pension at the end of the present month. Captain Edgett has served as chief deputy for thirty-seven years. It is understood that Edgett will be succeeded by Peter F. J. Carney, who has served for several years as corporation clerk in the office.

NO APPLAUSE AS JOHN W. WEEKS IS DECLARED ELECTED

John W. Weeks was declared elected United States Senator from Massachusetts today at 12:10 o'clock by President Greenwood of the Senate, presiding over a joint meeting of the House and Senate in the chamber of the House. He is elected for six years, to take his seat March 4.

The two bodies met at noon. President Greenwood took the chair. The journals of the House and Senate, covering yesterday's voting on the Senatorship, were read. It showed Weeks had received a majority of the votes in both bodies. The announcement was received in silence. Not a ripple of applause was heard. The joint meeting was dissolved.

Mr. Weeks put in several busy hours today at his headquarters at the Parker House, packing up and getting ready generally for his departure for Washington. Assisting him was his campaign manager, Representative Thomas W. White of Newton. "I expect to leave for Washington this week," the Senator-elect said.

JAPANESE VICTIM DRUGGED

A Japanese found dying and stripped of all valuables except a few cents, in an alley off Joiner street on the Charlestown waterfront, had been drugged, with robbery as the motive, according to a new theory advanced by the police today. The case is now one of murder, for the Japanese died soon after being found.

The unfortunate Oriental was thought by Mrs. Mary Meurling of No. 7 Joiner street, on the corner of the death alley, to whom he had applied for lodging a moment before, to be intoxicated. But the police call attention to the fact that Japanese, of whom there are many in Boston, especially at the Charlestown Navy Yard, are seldom seen overcome merely by liquor alone. They are a discreet people, and when one of them drinks intoxicating liquors, he seldom does so to excess.

According to Mrs. Meurling's story, the Jap was probably a victim of four young men. Mrs. Meurling has a boarding and lodging house. It was 9:30 when the Jap knocked at her door.

While the Japanese was standing on the stair way leading to Mrs. Meurling's door, a stocky, muscular youth, wearing a reefer and light gray cap, ran up the stairs and said to the Japanese:

"What are you doing? Don't you understand this woman has no rooms? Come along with me."

The Japanese went down stairs, escorted by the newcomer.

A moment later her young married daughter, Mrs. Vera Fitzgerald, heard sounds of a scuffle. Looking out a window on Joiner street Mrs. Fitzgerald saw four figures run away in the darkness. She could also discern the sheet of a figure prone on the asphalt at the head of the alley leading off Joiner street.

Police Start Investigation.

The police found no marks on the body, which is now in the North Grove street morgue, awaiting inspection by Medical Examiner Magrath.

Special Officers Brady and Norton of Charlestown worked all night, trying to pick up the trail of one or more of the quartet which seemed to have figured in the attack.

All effort to identify the victim has been futile. In his pockets were found only these articles: White linen handkerchief without initial, latch key and few cents in change.

B. & M. MILEAGE NOT GOOD ON THE B. & A.

Mileage books have now gone on sale at Boston & Maine and New Haven ticket offices "interchangeable" for either road. Although both 500 and 1,000-mile New Haven and Boston & Albany mileage books are interchangeable on those roads, Boston & Maine mileage is not good for fare on the Boston & Albany, and the interchange mileage between the Boston & Maine and New Haven roads is limited to 1,000-mile books.

HEAD OF WABASH ROAD IS INJURED

Wants $8,900 Fee for Sunrise Drives Given Aged Woman

The suit of Floyd S. Rand of Pigeon Cove, Gloucester, to recover $8,900 for services from the estate of the late Mrs. Mary A. Taft of Pigeon Cove and Worcester, whom Rand says he used to take her driving around Worcester at 2 a. m. to see the sunrise, was scheduled to go to the jury in Worcester Superior Civil Court today. Mrs. Taft was eighty years old when she died.

Rand worked for Mrs. Taft from 1901 to her death in October, 1909, and is now suing Mrs. Ellen L. Blinn, daughter of Mrs. Taft, who is administratrix of her mother's estate. Mrs. Blinn testified that Rand was to get $25 a month and was owed only two months' pay when Mrs. Taft died.

Rand denied being "merely a servant."

"Mrs. Taft wanted somebody to take care of her property and see she was protected," he declared. In regard to the midnight drives, he said:

"Mrs. Taft couldn't sleep. I used to harness the horse and take her for a ride around Worcester, to Paxton, over the hills around through Millbury, where we could see the sun rising over the city."

Mrs. Taft's blind sister, Miss Ella S. Roper, seventy-two years old, was led to the stand and testified she knew of no such trips of her sister.

The fourteenth case is that of a new arrival in the city.

BURLEIGH WINS; VOTE CONTESTED

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 15.—Former Governor Edwin C. Burleigh, Republican, was elected United States Senator to succeed Obadiah Gardner on the first ballot in joint convention of the Legislature here at noon today. Burleigh received the exact number of votes to give him the senatorship.

Three members of the Legislature whose seats are contested because they were fourth-place postmasters voted for Burleigh. The legality of their ballots is to be taken before the Maine Supreme Court to test the validity of the election of Burleigh.

Senator Gardner, who received nine votes less than Burleigh, said that he was disposed to contest the vote. Democratic leaders declared the United States Senate might be expected to investigate the election of Burleigh.

The ballot resulted as follows:

Burleigh, Republican	91
Obadiah Gardner, Democrat	82
E. M. Thompson, Progressive	7
Total vote cast	180
Necessary for choice	91

The Democrats failed to get the expected support of the Bull Moosers. The six Progressive legislators voted for Thompson. With them voted Stanley of Cumberland, a Democrat. Other than Stanley, Republicans and Democrats lined up solidly for Burleigh and Gardner.

Democratic leaders declared that not only were three Republican seats in question, but that "pressure" had been brought to bear on Progressives and Republicans alike to elect Burleigh. A report went the rounds that Senator Richardson of Camden, a Bull Moose, had been approached by the agents of two big corporations who asked him to vote for Burleigh. He voted for Thompson.

Before the joint convention opened, the House of Representatives took up the question of the right of four postmasters to their seats in the House. One of the four has already been refused the right to vote and did not take part in today's joint ballot. An order referring the question of the legality of their seats to the State Supreme Court was tabled, and is expected to come up tomorrow. It is the claim of friends of the four postmasters, who have now resigned their postmasterships, that the words "post offices" in the State Constitution do not refer to postmasters, but to officers of army posts.

WOMAN PICKET WHIPS N. Y. "COP"

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Miss Louisa Bork, a picket for the striking shirtwaist workers, today whipped one policeman and fought so energetically that it required the aid of two more officers before she was placed in a cell. The girl was ordered to "move on." When he attempted to push her along she drove her fist into the face.

Protest Statues at Charlestown Library Station

Prominent residents of Charlestown today protested to Mayor Fitzgerald against the proposal of the library trustees to place a stone in the front of the new library building to be constructed in Monument square, upon which is shown in relief the nude figures of two boys.

The stone, on which have been chiseled the figures, is about 4 feet long and four feet thick. The figures are duplicates of those that are to be seen in the front of the central library.

Charlestown doesn't like the figures and they want Mayor Fitzgerald to get the library trustees to have them eliminated.

One of the leaders in the movement against this form of art in connection with the Charlestown library is the Rev. Dr. John W. McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's Church, who wrote Mayor Fitzgerald his views on the matter. Others who feel the same way are former Alderman John J. Mahoney, Dr. Francis P. Sliss, president of the Charlestown Improvement Association, and Dr. John Duff.

OIL KING'S BROTHER MUST TALK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—That William Rockefeller, the elusive Standard Oil magnate, will testify before the Pujo money trust investigating committee was made certain today by the report of Dr. Charles W. Richardson, the government's special alienist to Miami, Florida, to examine the financier.

Dr. Richardson stated on the witness stand that although not in good physical condition and a victim of shaking palsy, Rockefeller could testify for two hours without danger to himself. After Dr. Richardson's testimony, Chairman Pujo announced that the committee would determine its course later.

Dr. Richardson qualified as an expert, stating he had been a specialist on nose, ear and throat diseases for twenty-five years and was consulting physician at many prominent hospitals.

Vocal Cords in Bad Shape.

Rockefeller, the witness said, came to Miami especially to be examined. The examination continued an hour, during which time Dr. Richardson learned that Rockefeller's right vocal cords were entirely gone and the anterior portion of the left cords had been removed. The affidavits of Rockefeller's physician, Dr. William F. Chappell, does not entirely fit the case, the witness said. He declared that Chappell was wrong in his assertion that to testify would kill Rockefeller. Dr. Richardson learned that Rockefeller had undergone four operations since 1905, when the trouble began.

The financier's pulse was 100 and his blood pressure was 172 during Dr. Richardson's examination.

Afflicted with Palsy.

Describing the palsy from which Rockefeller suffers, Dr. Richardson said:

"In order to get a graphic test, I asked

RUSH WARSHIP TO MEXICO TO GUARD YANKEES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Navy Department today ordered the cruiser Denver, now at San Diego, Cal., to proceed to Acapulco, Mex., to protect American lives and interests. The Denver will reach Acapulco in four days.

The orders dispatching the Denver were admitted by the State Department officials to be only the first step in carrying out the threat made in President Taft's ultimatum of December 19, in which he warned Mexico that the United States would intervene if foreigners south of the Rio Grande were not protected by Mexican federal troops.

It is understood that the Navy Department also was requested by Secretary of State Knox to hold another warship ready to proceed to Vera Cruz, the other Mexican port now threatened by the rebels. As the greater portion of the Atlantic fleet is off Guantanamo, Cuba, only two days from Vera Cruz, the United States is in a position to make a strong demonstration at that point on short notice.

BURRAGE TELLS AMALGAMATED DEAL IN 1899

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Albert C. Burrage of Boston, the copper man, was the first witness before the Pujo "Money Trust" investigating committee today.

He was questioned as to the organization of the Amalgamated Copper Company in 1899. He admitted the creation of a dummy board of directors, including J. P. Morgan, James Stillman, Marcus Daly, William Rockefeller, H. H. Rogers and others, to take over copper and lumber properties.

Mr. Burrage could not tell how much he made in the transaction. He said he knew Thomas W. Lawson had made money out of the deal, but could not say how much.

The witness said his dealings were with H. H. Rogers, but could not remember anything definite about the profits.

A. C. Burrage is generally regarded as the Standard Oil representative in New England. He has also been called the richest man in this section of the country. His home on Commonwealth avenue is a palace. Twenty-five years ago he was a struggling young lawyer in Boston, and his rise to power and riches reads like a romance.

Burrage became a multi-millionaire because he was a man who sought diligently for an opportunity and made the most of one when he found it. When "Dan" Addicks got control of the big Bloomingdale Light interests of this city in the eighties he tried to invade Brooklyn, which was the domain of Standard Oil, and particularly of the late Henry H. Rogers.

Burrage discovered that the charter of the Brooklyn Gas Company gave it the right to enter Boston. Through his tip Rogers got possession of a franchise which enabled him to drive Addicks out of the Boston field.

Burrage got his chance with Standard Oil as a result and made millions. Like all Standard Oil men, he took the background. But little is heard of him except in financial circles. He moves quietly, even in them.

Burrage is a small, well-mannered and good-looking man. He is good to his friends and charitable in general.

WINFIELD ADMITS MISSTATEMENTS ON OIL LETTER "THEFT"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—William W. Winfield, the negro messenger formerly employed in the office of John D. Archbold, admitted to the Clapp investigating committee today that he had made "misstatements" in the testimony which he gave yesterday concerning the abstraction of letters and bic books from John D. Archbold's office at No. 26 Broadway, New York.

Winfield said he was suffering from "stage fright" yesterday, and told a new story in part concerning the alleged theft of the Standard Oil letters to Representatives and Senators.

Winfield gave as a further excuse for his misstatements of yesterday that he also had a headache. Asked to make any correction he desired, Winfield said he was wrong in telling about two letters having been taken from the Standard Oil files. There was one telegram, three batches of letters, containing several separate letters, and two copybook. In all five deliveries were made to a newspaper office.

The first batch was taken by Stumph when Winfield went to the cellar to get his keys and found Stumph there. He could not read the contents of the typewritten letters nor the signatures, but he thought they were from Penrose, Quay and Fernker.

In a general way their contents were "in the nature of connection with these gentlemen and the Standard Oil Company," he said.

He thought two letters were taken the first time and his share of the money paid for them was $333.32.

Senator Jones asked how the witness was to determine what letters to take. Winfield said he had been instructed to pick out letters which passed between the Standard Oil and members of Congress.

The second time about four letters were taken. His share this time was $500. The next lot was three, four or five letters and he got a third of $1,000. The copy books were taken on the last trip.

Winfield said he did not know whether enough was drifting equally on the receipts, but had to take his word for it.

Zimmer never was present when the letters were taken, but they were turned over to him and all three went down to the newspaper building. Zimmer went inside alone and when he came out with the money they went to a saloon, or somewhere else and divided.

FRUIT LINE SILENT ON RUMOR OF U. S. REGISTRY OF FLEET

The officials of the United Fruit Company refuse to affirm or deny the reports that the fleet of new ships owned by the company and built during the past two years at Belfast, Ire., is to be given an American registry upon an agreement by the company to hold them in reserve as troop ships in case of war. To do this would require an act of Congress, as under the present laws of foreign built ship cannot receive an American registry unless she has been rebuilt at an expense of 60 per cent. of her original cost.

It has been reported that the United Fruit Company and other American owners of foreign-built ships have a lobby at work at Washington to bring about this result, and that it has the approval of the War and Navy Departments.

STEAMERS DELAYED BY STORM AT SEA

Wireless messages received in Boston today from the mid-Atlantic indicate that the terrible wind storms which have harrassed shipping since late December continue, and that ships are still unable to keep their schedules. Captain Shepherd of the Leyland liner Winifredian sent a marconigram to the Boston office today stating that he would not dock before Friday. The ship has sixteen passengers, and is now four days overdue. The Boston office of the Cunard line today received a message from the Ivernia, due here tonight or early tomorrow, which indicates she will not arrive before Saturday or Sunday. She has nearly 500 passengers aboard.

him to write, I standing behind him without his knowledge. He wrote continuously with great effort for two and one-half minutes, and at the end of that time had transcribed only eleven words."

Dr. Richardson said this proved it would be impossible to hold an examination in writing. Rockefeller might have a hemorrhage or swelling of the larnyx, which would render his voice inaudible, Dr. Richardson insisted, but this was not probable. Rockefeller's voice can be heard at a distance of about twenty feet.

"A short examination," the doctor said, "might be held without danger to the patient.

"A long examination would affect the voice, the left vocal cords weakening because of the intense strain, and it would become inaudible. I think a long examination would be detrimental in a remote way."

"Would you advise the committee to call him?" asked Counsel Untermyer.

"I think he could testify for a couple of hours," replied Richardson.

Dr. Richardson defended Rockefeller's physician for attempting to prevent him from testifying. He said if the disorder had been his patient he would have done the same thing.

CASTRO FRETFUL OVER DETENTION

CARPENTER ON STAND DENIES $30,000 THEFT

Frederic L. Carpenter, on trial in the Suffolk Court, charged with the larceny of bonds of $30,000 from his sister-in-law, the late Jennie S. Gookin, took the stand in his own defence and denied the accusations. He explained his absence from Boston while a secret indictment was pending against him by testifying that he left the city because of trouble with his wife and was eluding detectives hired by Mrs. Carpenter.

He told Judge Aiken and the jury that following a reconciliation with his wife he learned of the indictment when Inspector Waite of the Boston police arrested him in New York.

"Even then I hurried considerably to assist the inspector in catching an early train for Boston."

Under examination by Attorney Kelley, Carpenter told of his business relations with Mrs. Gookin. He said that he went to work for her twenty years ago, and twelve years ago married her sister, the present Mrs. Carpenter. Later they purchased the Gookin shop on Temple place and at one time he filed a suit against Mme. Gookin because, according to his statement, she had not lived up to an agreement. The suit was settled shortly before Mme. Gookin died.

Denied Selling Bonds.

He denied selling Mme. Gookin's bonds and said that he didn't sell the ten bonds given to his wife by Mme. Gookin until a month after her death.

"You remember Attorney McCarthy's testimony that he called you up after Mrs. Gookin had died asking you how she was and that you replied that she was unconscious?" he was asked by Attorney Kelly.

"Yes, and I did say that."

"Why did you say she was unconscious when she was dead?"

"Because I understood that McCarthy intended to come out and claim that he was married to Mrs. Gookin."

Carpenter identified checks signed by "James W. Johnson" and an "A. Smith" and denied that the names were his signatures.

Gives Sample of Writing.

Upon his return from Europe he had remained in New Hampshire, he said. He had asked Mr. Duff to find out if his wife and secured her divorce against him, saying that he intended to remain away from Massachusetts until the case was over.

"I kept my whereabouts secret from my wife," he said. "You ought to know that, Mr. Kelly, you were my wife's attorney then."

Later a reconciliation had been effected between him and his wife.

In cross-examination Carpenter denied that he knew the officers of the Commonwealth were on his trail for over a year on the indictment warrant.

He was asked to write the name of "James W. Johnson" after he had denied ever using that name to sign checks with and he did so.

On leaving this trip to Europe then just because of the Pemberton Sales Company, to buy furniture?"

"That and because of the trouble with my wife."

The Real Cause of Most Bad Complexions

(From Family Physician.)

It is a stern fact that no truly beautiful complexion ever came out of jars or bottles, and the longer one uses cosmetics the worse the complexion becomes. Skin, to be healthy, must breathe. If it is to be made clear, through the pores, its share of the body's refuse matter(s). Creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing. If more women understood this, there would be fewer wretched complexions. If they would use ordinary unscrolled wax instead of cosmetics, they would have natural, healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs bad skin, also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger under-skin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. An exquisite new complexion gradually peeps out, one free from all sallow, muddy appearances. Get an ounce of unrolled wax at your druggist's and use a little nightly like cold cream. In a week or so, washing it off mornings.

To avoid irritation, here's a marvelous effective treatment which also acts naturally: Dissolve one ounce powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel and use as a wash lotion.

La Touraine The Perfect Coffee

A Sensible Comparison

The fresh and natural flavors of Green Corn in the ear, Green Peas and Shell Beans in the pod, picked fresh from the garden are as much superior to the flavors of canned vegetables as the flavor of fresh roasted and fresh ground La Touraine is superior to the flavors of canned coffee.

Canned vegetables are a necessity but at no season of the year is canned coffee a necessity

A test will disclose the fact that fresh roasted and fresh ground La Touraine produces a delicious and invigorating beverage while the drink produced from canned coffees is dull and insipid by comparison.

'I'LL MAKE GOOD,' SAYS WATSON TO FRIEND AND FOE

Councilman-elect James A. ("Jerry") Watson was one of the first visitors at City Hall today and before he left he took a look at the seat of Councilman Matthew Hale which he will occupy after February 3.

It was a continuous reception for the new councilman-elect, who is the second man to defeat the Good Government forces since the adoption of the new city charter. "Jerry" had no votes to spare after his strenuous open-air campaign, but he still had his smile and handshake.

"You can say this much for me," he said to the AMERICAN. "I will not be the chronic obstructionist which some of my enemies have tried to paint me but at the same time I shall be on the alert that none of these hypocritical reformers manipulate measures through the City Council without some publicity."

"Jerry" then dictated the following statement to convey his thanks to the 24,693 voters who cast their ballots for him yesterday.

My election seems to have pleased others besides my immediate family, friends and neighbors. It certainly is very displeasing to the privilege seeking small class and their controlled newspapers.

I will be a councilman for three years if I live as well as a county commissioner for Suffolk County and no act of mine will ever bring the blush of shame to any honest citizen whether he voted for me or not. I will make good if it is in me.

I do not intend to come up to the expectations and hopes of my political enemies. I intend to live with the people who have done much business with the city in the matter of new streets since the new city charter has been in force.

The Finance Commission must keep down its ever increasing expense account and render dollar for dollar to the city.

I have much to do and will do it from time to time. I shall be at City Hall to meet all the people as long as my strength will permit me to do so.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of Le Temps, the stork is expected to visit the Russian imperial family in the Spring. How She Fooled the Doctor

Three years ago my little girl, Augusta, was taken sick with scarlet fever and later dropsy set in; her face and limbs swelled until her eyes puffed. A leading physician here at the time, treated her without the slightest success. A sample of your Swamp-Root having been left at the house at the time, I resolved to try it, and as it agreed with her stomach I continued using it with grateful results. The inflammation began to subside after she had taken the first fifty-cent bottle, and after she took two large bottles she was pronounced cured by the doctor and has been in good health ever since. The doctor came to see her every day and examined her every second day until he pronounced her kidneys in perfect condition.

Now then the doctor was under the impression that I was giving my girl his medicine, but as his medicine had failed to do a bit of good, and desiring not to offend him, I did not tell him I was giving her Swamp-Root and he did not know the difference. I did not use one drop of his medicine after I started my girl on Swamp-Root, and have always felt that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root saved my girl's life, for which I am grateful.

I cannot praise it too highly.

"I Am Delighted," Says Miss Curtis

Woman Winner Plans to Help Schools

WOMAN ELECTED AS MEMBER OF BOSTON SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Miss Curtis Would Further Work Already Accomplished, But Also Has Ideas of Her Own.

"I know just how serious is the work before me. I realize that great results will be expected from me, and I propose to start at once to learn what I can of the school department, so that I may be in a better position to take up my work when I become a member of the school board."

Miss Frances G. Curtis, the first woman chosen to the school board since that body was reduced to five members, tackled the new job today—now waiting for the official count or inauguration day. She declared that she means to "make good," and to back up her intention she started at once to demonstrate that she was "worthy of the support accorded her."

Miss Curtis, daughter of Greely S. Curtis, sister of Miss Margaret Curtis, champion American golfer; Miss Harriet S. Curtis, ex-champion golfer; James F. Curtis, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, and G. S. Curtis, a busy aeroplane maker, and a member of one of the busiest families in Boston, promises to become one of the busiest of them all.

Between the receipt of scores of congratulations upon her election, the vivacious new member of the school board found time to say:

"Pleased! That's too mild a word. I am delighted with my victory. The support which Boston women gave me contributed a great deal to my success. While I am not one of your wild suffragettes, I owe my thanks to the women voters. They are a force to be reckoned with.

"I am already beginning to appreciate what exceedingly hard work confronts me—work that will require much of my time and attention for the next three years.

"I feel that the public schools, in the midst of so much criticism, have not received proper credit for the things they have already accomplished. I believe in extending much of the work along the line that it is already taking. But like I have plans of my own—which, no doubt, will take a great deal of my time and attention for the next three years.

"My first work will be to learn all that I can of what is being done in the public schools and by the committee, so that I shall be ready to really accomplish something when I take my new position.

"A great deal will be expected of me, and I mean to prove that I am worthy of the support given me in the contest. Activity is not new to Miss Curtis. It is a family trait. She has been active ever since she went to Radcliffe, where she studied philosophy and economics. For more than twelve years she has devoted her efforts almost exclusively to matters of public welfare. She has been a member of the State Board of Charities all that time, the latter half of that period as chairman of a committee having charge of 5,000 children.

Miss Curtis has been a director of the Boston Associated Charities and president of the Massachusetts State Conference of Charities. She is a director of the Massachusetts Civic League, a member of the Beacon School Neighborhood Association, chairman of the Arlington committee of the National Playground Association and vice-president of the Drama League of Boston. She has been secretary of the Boston Co-operative Building Association for several years, as well as a director of the Improved Buildings Association.

Referring to her election, Charles F. Ilsley, secretary of the Public School Association, said today:

"The result is gratifying, although unexpected. It indicates that citizens who are interested enough in the welfare of the schools to cast a ballot believe in keeping the schools out of politics and out of the petty politics out of the schools.

"The association believes that this victory is also largely due to the loyal support of so excellent a woman candidate as Miss Curtis by those women voters of Boston who sincerely believed last year, as this year, that there should be a woman on the Boston school committee."

LIGHT VOTE AT CITY ELECTION BIG SURPRISE

Political leaders express themselves as surprised today at the light vote cast at the city election yesterday when three places in the council and one in the school board were filled.

John J. Attridge and Walter L. Collins were re-elected to the council and James A. ("Jerry") Watson was elected to the same body, defeating Lewis J. Hewitt, the fourth candidate, by 848 votes.

For the school board Miss Frances G. Curtis of Beacon Hill, indorsed by the Public School Association, defeated Isaac Harris, the Democratic candidate, by 5,008 votes.

On the two other election issues the city went license by over 15,000 and went on record for the acceptance of the eight-hour bill for public employes by over 28,000 majority.

But the smallness of the vote was a disagreeable feature to those who like to see citizens take active interest in municipal affairs. The total vote was 49,242.

The men who walked out short ballot—there were only six names on this one—cannot in any sense be said to have produced a heavy vote. So far as comparison of size of vote and length of ballot goes, yesterday's poll only shows that the shorter the ballot the lighter the poll.

The Good Government Association's slate was broken by "Jerry" Watson. The G. G. A. endorsed Attridge, Collins and Hewitt for the Council and advised the defeat of Watson. In spite of this opposition Watson secured the third place and Hewitt was defeated.

The G. G. A. and the Public School Association endorsed Miss Curtis for the School Board and her election was a defeat for the Democratic city machine, which had endorsed and worked vigorously for Isaac Harris.

PUTS 4-YEAR LIMIT ON ANY MARRIAGE

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 15.—"Four years is long enough to live with any man." This was the only excuse the wife of William A. Nagel gave when she left him in 1908, according to the testimony of the husband. The latter testified that on the day she left his wife hit him over the head with a cup.

MADAM! IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT TAKE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Waste-clogged bowels, torpid liver and decaying food in stomach cause the sick headache, gas, backache, sallowness, biliousness and indigestion.

All women get bilious, headachy and constipated—simply because they don't exercise enough. They don't eat coarse food or enough fruit and green vegetables. Those are nature's ways of keeping the liver and thirty feet of bowels active; but very few women employ them. The next best way is delightful, fruity Syrup of Figs.

Nearly all ills of women can be overcome with Syrup of Figs alone. There is no need to have sick headache, backache, dizziness, stomach sour and full of gases, bilious spells, sallowness, coated tongue, bad breath, bad complexion, nervousness and depression. The surest and safest remedy is one or two teaspoonfuls of delicious Syrup of Figs. Try this tonight—you'll feel splendid in the morning when the sour bile, clogging waste and poisonous matter have been gently but thoroughly moved on and out of the system, without nausea, griping or weakness. Your head will be clear, complexion rosy, breath sweet, stomach regulated; no more constipation, gases, pains and aches.

It is simply a matter of keeping your stomach, liver and bowels clean and regular. Then you will always be well and look and feel your best.

But get the genuine—the old reliable. Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse, with contempt, the so-called Fig Syrups sometimes substituted to fool you. The true, genuine, bears the name California Fig Syrup Company; look for this on the label.

POEM PROVES TITLE TO $5,000 ESTATE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 15.—By proving that his uncle wrote a poem called "Serenade to Summer," Virgil F. Phelps of Prudenville, Orleans County, New York, won the estate valued at $5,000, left by his uncle, Morris A. Phelps, who disappeared in 1870. It was read in court by Phelps from his uncle's handwriting, and while the quality of the poetry did not particularly impress Judge Gilson, it established the identity of the nephew and his claim as heir.

NEW TONIC IS AIDING MORE PEOPLE DAILY

Every day many statements are being received by people who are sufferers from nervous debility and who have been relieved after taking a few doses of Toma Vita.

The following statement was given by Bernard Mounghe, of 19 Polk street, Charlestown, Boston.

"Toma Vita has done more for me than any other medicine I have ever taken.

"For a long time I have been suffering from what one might describe as that 'worn-out' feeling. I would wake up tired in the morning after a poor night's sleep. I felt depressed in mind, my nerves were all on edge; I had no ambition or vitality. My business began to suffer, because such was the condition of my health that I had not the nerve to grasp the opportunities like I did formerly.

"Since taking Toma Vita I am my old self once more again. After the first few doses I began to feel much better. The result was so quick that at first I thought it was just imagination on my part, as I had tried so many different remedies without relief. But now I eat well, sleep well and that tired worn-out feeling has vanished. This is a marvelous tonic, judging by what it has done for me."

"No medicine can be successful unless it has a mission to accomplish," said one of the physicians who is introducing Toma Vita.

"Toma Vita has a mission—it is introduced to cope with that tremendous ailment, Nervous Debility, which is undermining the strength and ambition of this country or ours. A similar preparation accomplished wonders in Europe, and there is no doubt but that Toma Vita will lift the burden of ill-health from the shoulders of many thousands in the United States.

"There are years of vigorous, healthy life in every bottle that is sold over the counter in the drug stores in Boston."

REJECT BONDS FOR RELEASE OF 3 DYNAMITERS

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—On the objection of U. S. District Attorney Charles W. Miller of Indianapolis, the Circuit Court of Appeals today refused to approve bonds offered for the release of Frank M. Ryan, president of the Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, William Bain and E. H. Houlihan, now in federal prison for conspiracy in the dynamite cases.

Bond for Charles N. Bemis of Minneapolis was approved, Miller offering no objections.

The objection to the bond for the three Chicago men was that the property scheduled as not sufficient in value. The property, Miller asserted, was worth $57,500 when a total of approximately $200,000 should have been scheduled.

PROPOSALS IN WRITING WON'T DO, SAYS BISHOP

By SYBIL WARNE.

Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan condemns the bill of Representative Winfield F. Prime of Winchester, which proposes that no contract for marriage shall be binding except it is in writing.

The bishop thinks that signed contracts for marriage will do nothing to correct some of the evils caused by breach of promise suits.

More serious consideration of the marriage engagement and what it means, and less trifling with the affections of women, will do more to remedy many of the heartburn suits. Bishop Williams is at present in Boston, preaching in Harvard University and in St. Paul's Cathedral.

"I do not believe that you can regulate marriage engagements by making them legal contracts," said Bishop Williams. "When two persons make up their minds to be engaged to be married, that engagement should be based upon love and kept upon that basis. The idea of binding it as if it were a contract to build a house, is absurd.

"People become engaged to be married, because they love each other. That's the only contract.

"Suppose for one moment that this bill of Winfield F. Prime before the Massachusetts Legislature passed. It would not right matters any. People who cannot keep their marriage engagements are not going to keep them through mere written contract.

"If they marry because this contract is binding, will they be happy under those conditions?

"Put more real love into your engagements and do not get engaged too early. Get engaged when you have thought seriously upon the matter and then keep it after you have made it.

"Do not be numbered among those who cannot keep anything outside of a written contract.

"Make your own stand for something in business. Don't try to crawl out of anything that is honorable. If you have committed yourself to a woman and you really love her, be loyal to her, unless for some good and sufficient reason you are forced to give her up.

"But those who trifle with a woman's affections cannot help be improved by the signing of a contract.

"You cannot make people love each other by signing a contract. How proud that love would be!

"You must protect your interests in marriage by love and your engagements by love, not by signed contracts.

"Don't start people into the voyage of life by making them more or less distrustful of one another.

"I certainly would not endorse this bill."

CUTTER SENT TO AID OF MALLORY LINER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The revenue cutter Miami sailed from St. Augustine, Fla., early today for Tortuga, Fla., to lend aid to the steamer Colorado of the Mallory line, aground near that place. A dispatch to revenue cutter headquarters here states that Captain Gable of the Miami heard by wireless the steamer has foundered. The Colorado carries freight and passengers, and fear is felt that some lives may be lost if heavy seas arise before the Miami can reach the ship. Revenue cutter headquarters were also notified by Captain Cairnes of the cutter Windom that he had heard nothing of the Eldorado of the Morgan line, bound for New Orleans. The Eldorado encountered a severe storm off Cape Hatteras several days ago.

600 SAILORS GUESTS AT CHURCH SUPPER

Six hundred sailors representing most of the steamships in port, told their friends today how a score of women and men, members of the Park Street Church, acted as waiters and served a supper to the hungry sailors at the Boston Seamen's Friend Society rooms, No. 287 Hanover street, last evening. Mrs. Dr. H. W. Broughton had charge of the arrangements. Each sailor was given a New Year's gift a jackknife, a muffler or the like. There were speeches by Rev. A. E. Conrad, pastor of the church; Samuel Usher, vice president of the board of managers, and Chaplain J. McD. Bliss.

MRS. BELMONT PAYS HER GROCERS' BILL

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 15.—Suit brought against Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont by F. P. Garretson, a Newport grocer, involving a bill of goods alleged by the plaintiff to have been purchased by Mrs. Belmont last Summer, was announced as settled when the case was called for trial in the district court here today. The reason was the finding of vouchers, the absence of which had caused her to dispute the charge. The case was settled for $434.

KEEP TARIFF ON SUGAR; CUT RATE, PLEADS 'TRUST'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The American Sugar Refining Company ("the Sugar Trust") presented to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives today a formal protest against the abolition of all duty upon sugar. The document was drawn up by Edwin F. Atkins of Boston, vice-president of the company. In part the protest states:

The American Sugar Refining Company wishes to be recorded in favor of a reduced tariff upon sugar. It is our belief that a moderate reduction, which is not so great as to endanger the domestic and insular industries, or to reduce such sources of supply, would accrue to the benefit of the consumer, and would neither increase foreign values on raw material nor increase the refiners' margin of profit per pound.

Foreign values are regulated only through the law of supply and demand; short crops will always advance prices, as excessive crops will depress them, regardless of tariffs. Such conditions cannot be regulated by legislation, but a reduction of duty upon imported raw material would be followed by a corresponding reduction of prices in refined sugar in the United States. The benefit to the refiners would arise from increased consumption through lowering of prices.

We are opposed to the abolition of all duty upon sugar for the following reasons:

It would at once destroy one of the largest sources of revenue, some fifty millions.

It would cause the termination of the Cuban reciprocity treaty under the provisions of which a preferential rate of 20 per cent. is accorded Cuban sugar.

It destroys the Louisiana industry, also the best sugar industry in many localities and particularly east of the Mississippi River.

23 WITNESSES FOR DONOVAN DEATH INQUIRY

The large number of witnesses summoned to testify at the inquest tomorrow in the Malden District Court before Judge E. Leroy Sweetser, into the death of Mrs Mildred Donovan of Revere indicated today how thorough the police probe of the mystery has been.

Twenty-three have been summoned. They will cover every phase of the mystery, and the testimony of some of them, if they give what they have already told, will link James B. Jennings, or "Kid Carter," as he is known in the prize ring, closer to the death of the young woman, who was his accredited fiancee. "Carter" now stands indicted for the murder of William B. McPherson, a waiter, in a South End saloon.

SECOND EXPLOSION VICTIM IS FOUND

PAWTUCKET, Jan. 15.—The body of Hassan Mammet of No. 7 Chester street, Providence, was found today by searchers in the ruins of the boiler house of the Glenlyon Dye Works at Saylesville. The boilerhouse and a nearby chemical laboratory were wrecked by the explosion of a tank. Mammet is the second victim. One employe is dying at the hospital.

American Actress Wins Her Lord and Social Status, Too

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Miss Olive May, the pretty and popular Gaiety girl, will be married Thursday to Lord Victor William Paget, broker and heir presumptive of the Marquis of Anglesey, one of the wealthiest men in England.

So the American-born actress has carried her point and won, not only Lord Victor's hand, but a social triumph. He has courted her devotedly for a year, and while she has confessed her love for him, she has broken their engagement twice. For she insisted that unless his family received her on terms of social equality, she would never marry him.

She has met the Pagets and they are hers. The Marquis of Anglesey, who recently married the beautiful Lady Marjorie Manners, was captivated. Lady Alexander Paget, Lord Victor's mother, was charmed by the actress' beauty and grace.

Miss May was born in Chicago and received her training for the stage at a conservatory there. She made a hit as Bonita in "Arizona."

Lord Victor, twenty-three years old, was until recently a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards. Directly after his honeymoon he will enter the Stock Exchange firm of Bourne, Boldt & Co.

GOMPERS SEES NEED OF LAWS TO SAVE CHILDREN

"If there is one phase of the labor movement more than another in which I am intensely interested it is the desire and attempt to lift the burden of toil from the shoulders of children," said Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to a reporter for the Hearst newspapers. "This has been my feeling all through my life. I know what child labor means from the standpoint of a child as well as from other points of view, for I entered the ranks of the workers myself at the age of ten."

This statement was made by President Gompers just before he left New York for Albany to confer with Governor Sulzer, Senator Wagner and others considering the question of child labor legislation. Concluding, Mr. Gompers said:

"For these reasons I am in hearty sympathy with the efforts of the Hearst newspapers and other influences as far as possible to abolish the child labor evil."

"What do you think the conference at Albany will accomplish?" he was asked.

"That is a hard question to answer, but the Factory Investigation Committee of which I am a member, has given two years of time to investigating conditions and studying remedies. We found the laws inadequate to grapple with conditions and under the leadership of Senator Wagner we have attempted to draw bills for presentation to the Legislature, which will cover the deficiencies in the existing law.

"This commission has been in existence two years and will expire by limitation on the fifteenth day of this month. It was under the direction of this commission that Miss Louise Chamberlain made her investigation of the canneries of New York and the subsequent disclosures startled not only the whole State, but the whole country.

"The bills drawn by the commission will be considered at the Governor's conference, and we here every assurance that he is in hearty accord with the attempt to reach a solution of this child slavery problem.

"We shall submit twenty-six bills, practically covering every phase of the subject. They are ameliorative, corrective and protective in character, and include both women and children.

ALLIES AGREE TO RENEW WAR AGAINST TURKS

SOFIA, Jan. 15.—King Ferdinand and the members of the cabinet started at midnight for Mustapha Pasha. They will meet in that town General Savoff, the commander-in-chief, and the commanders of the four Bulgarian armies.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Only the unexpected can halt a resumption of the Turco-Balkan war within a week. The allies have made up their minds to take up arms a second time. They say they are convinced that the Turks are merely drifting, without a fixed policy, and they have decided to end the seemingly fruitless debates and wire pulling and begin the battle anew where they left off more than a month ago.

Scutari's Plight Worse.

CETTINJE, Montenegro, Jan. 15.—Deserters from the Turkish Army besieged in Scutari took refuge in the Montenegrin Camp today and said that the situation in the beleaguered city is desperate. Soldiers and petty officers are being executed daily by Riza Bey, the Turkish commander, far daring to suggest surrender.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

Mixed with Sulphur, It Darkens Beautifully and Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known druggist in our town. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

CASSIDY TELLS ABOUT OLEO DEALER AND THE BOTTOMLESS FIRKIN

Harry P. Cassidy today tells the "Story of the Bottomless Firkin." That reads like a fairy tale's title. But it's just the story of one of the little tricks of the butter trade—the butter and oleomargerine trade. The story has been revived by the Federal authorities' discovery of huge frauds in the oleo trade, by which oleo was colored with a secret oil, and eluded the government's heavy tax. And Cassidy suggests a State law to blot out one of the evils of the oleo trade.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

You're read, or heard, the "Story of the Bottomless Purse."

Harry P. Cassidy. This is the "Story of the Bottomless Firkin."

The government chemists have discovered that oleo makers for the last few months or years have been coloring their oleo by a secret process which the government chemists failed to detect.

The tax on uncolored oleo is a quarter of a cent a pound. The tax on artificially colored oleo to ten cents a pound—because it looks like butter.

Since the cityless people have asked themselves: "How do the dealers make any profit out of coloring their oleo by this secret process?"

Here's the Fairy Tale.

And here comes the fairy tale.

Once upon a time there was a grocer. And this grocer was only making ten or fifteen cents a pound, profit, on his oleomargerine. And he was very distressed about it.

He thought about it so much and so long that it kept him awake nights, and when he did drop to sleep he was sure to dream about those miserable little oleo profits.

And so, one day, he had a dream that solved the whole problem. He woke up shrieking.

Next morning, that grocer bought a fine big firkin of colored oleomargerine. The price of that, in this story, was twenty-five cents a pound, and he could sell it at thirty-five. But that wouldn't be a really handsome profit.

And so, just as he had dreamed, he bought a dozen firkins of uncolored oleo, and put them down in his cellar.

This uncolored oleo cost fifteen cents a pound. He took some coloring liquid, which cost very little, and mixed up a firkin of the white oleo till it looked just like the colored oleo.

Then a person gets the oleo for which the grocer paid fifteen cents, and pays the grocer thirty-five cents for it.

The grocer was satisfied. But he kept his "Bottomless Firkin" of colored oleo handy. That was the regular colored oleo, on which the government tax had been paid.

Whenever a revenue man came in he would be shown the firkin of colored oleo—never empty.

And so the grocer lived happily ever after—till he got found out.

Where Remedy Lies.

That's the story of the bottomless firkin. It's an old one in the trade, and an old trick.

The remedy for this condition lies in a law, similar to the National law, and similar to the law in force in many States, under which State food inspectors have authority to look over the books of all oleo dealers and find out, in the case of wholesalers, to whom all oleo is sold, and, in the case of retailers, from whom all oleo is bought. This makes it possible to trace up sales of all oleo in the State, and to quickly detect any frauds or sharp dealing.

I will quote the Pennsylvania law on this point. It's a good one, and a similar passage might well be inserted in the oleo act here.

"Every licensed manufacturer of oleo . . . shall keep a book in which shall be entered accurately every sale and shipment of oleo . . . giving the date of sale and shipment, the quantity, the person to whom sold or shipped, the place to which shipped, and the name of the transportation line by which shipped; which book shall always be open to the examination of the . . . food officers of the State. Every licensed retail dealer . . . shall keep a similar book recording his purchases of oleo."

A wholesaler in oleo, under the government rules, is a dealer who sells in lots of ten pounds or over. A retailer sells in lots under ten pounds.

Such an act as that would furnish the authorities a powerful weapon in their pursuit of the illegal oleo dealer.

The Oleo Frauds.

The revelations of the oleo frauds have followed congressional investigation of the administration of the oleo tax. The investigation is continued today.

It is promised that some sensational developments will follow.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge Landis, in Chicago, has taken steps toward a Grand Jury investigation of the alleged frauds, with the purpose of determining just where the responsibility lies, and following up with vigorous action.

The case is one of the most remarkable ever brought before the officials. The oleo law provides for a tax of one-fourth cent per pound on uncolored oleo, and 10 cents on colored. The intention being to make sale of the colored product impossible. People want oleo, if they use it, at least to look like butter. It was supposed when the law was passed that if coloring was prevented they would not buy it, and the dairy interests would then be protected.

The present fraud charges date back about two years, to the development of a process for refining oils, by which, without the use of any coloring matter whatever, they could be given the yellow tone desired by the oleo makers. This process was secret, but the refined oils, with the fine yellow color, were taken to the big oleo manufacturers, with the explanation that at last a process had been found to get the yellow color without violating the law.

It looked good to the oleo people. They set their chemists at work to discover if there was coloring matter, and, according to their statement, found none. Then, before beginning to use the oil, they brought it to the treasury and explained the situation. The treasury chemists tried to find how that oil was made yellow, but could locate no coloring in it.

The bureau of chemistry analyzed it for coloring matter, and was just as unsuccessful. Evidently it was just what its makers claimed: but it was done by a secret process.

The oleo people finally took the oil and made yellow oleo with it. They marketed it as "uncolored," and paid the one-fourth cent, instead of the ten cent tax; the Treasury, however, stipulating that they were to add a good if coloring matter turned up. The manufacturers were so certain of a big saving of the oil that they took the chance.

The chemist kept on worrying about that oil. One day a Treasury chemist opened a bottle of it, smelled it critically, pricked up his ear, and said:

"Ah, ha!"

He had smelled sulphur. He analyzed it for sulphur. He found that it got its color from sulphur fumes, which had been passed through the oil, creating it with sulphurbolein thi'.

That made it a violation of the law. The manufacturers of the oleo protested their innocence and good faith. The department believed them. They had sold the yellow oleo at a price that didn't contemplate payment of the other 9¾ cents tax; if it were imposed they would have to dig up from $1,000,000 to $1,200,000 of back revenue taxes; moreover, some people who didn't think they were necessarily so innocent, wanted them prosecuted, and Judge Landis got busy with his Grand Jury as soon as he heard of it. It looked both expensive and dangerous.

Compromise Held Up.

The Treasury has been negotiating for a compromise of the law. It is understood that this compromise looks to taking about $100,000 instead of the $1,000,000 or more that is due under a strict construction.

Some of the congressional investigators, learning of this pending compromise, have decided that it will not do. They don't believe the oleo people are so innocent as they claim; anyhow, they want to be sure of it. The compromise of the tax, affair has been held up.

The oleo tax bill has been, of all the measures committed to the Treasury, the most difficult to enforce. With butter so costly as now, multitudes of people want a substitute. They prefer it to look like butter. Unscrupulous dealers want to accommodate—and frequently to deceive—them.

MISS MORRISON RESENTS SLUR ON HUB STYLE

By SYBIL WARNE.

Miss Jean Morrison, president of the Woman's Municipal League of East Boston, disagrees with Dr. Winfield Scott Hall of Chicago, who is quoted as saying that Boston women age the daring styles of dress of Parisians.

Miss Morrison asserts that Boston women, while improving in their style of dress, have never ventured beyond that which is modest and as simple as possible.

More than this, Miss Morrison points out that the women of Boston do not have to go to the lengths that they do in some other cities in adornment to make them attractive.

This is Miss Morrison's reply to the remarks credited to the fault-finding Chicago man

It seems to me outrageous for Dr. Winfield Scott Hall of Chicago to declare that Boston in dress is the most suggestive city in the United States, and that its girls are the daring styles of Paris.

Really what does he mean by this?

Boston is very conservative in dress. Occasionally an open neck for a function you may see a few stunning dresses on well known women, but the average dress of women in Boston deserves no such rebuke as Dr. Hall's.

It seems to be the weakness of some well known persons living outside of Boston to get a reputation at times, by saying strange things against Boston.

Boston can take care of itself, however.

You take the average working girl in this city. Does she try to ape the styles of Paris? For neatness and simplicity in dress these girls show considerable taste and good judgment.

The average working girl does wonders in looking well in her outward adornment. Had Dr. Hall said this, and he could not help saying it if he had watched our working girls going to work every morning, he would have hit it right. Often they make their dresses themselves.

Then take the average woman on Boston streets. Does she come in for this rebuke of Dr. Hall.

All you have to do is to walk along one of Boston's thoroughfares, and you will see nothing suggestive in dress to be sure, there are different styles, but those styles are tame alongside what you often see in other cities like New York and elsewhere.

Boston women can look well in anything, so long as it is made neat and attractive.

WOMEN RELATE TROUBLES IN DIVORCE COURT

Mrs. Florence Green told Judge Dubuque in the Suffolk Divorce Court today that her husband left her five days after they were married, returned in two days, stayed one day, gave her a black eye and left for good.

After Mrs. Green had recited other troubles, in addition to this, Judge Dubuque granted her a decree nisi.

Mrs. Green was succeeded by other complainants seeking divorce.

Mrs. Mary E. Huber of Jamaica Plain was married to Henry Huber in 1901 and, according to her story, they lived like turtle doves until 1907. But, she said:

"One night, in 1907, he walked out of the house and I have never seen him since. He had no reason to leave me."

She got a decree on the ground of desertion.

30,000 Garment Workers Join Strikers' Ranks

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—This city's garment strike assumed gigantic proportions today, when thirty thousand makers of waists and dresses, almost ninety per cent. of whom are girls and women, were ordered to strike.

With these additions the total number now out is 173,000, as follows: United Garment Workers, 110,000; wrapper and kimono workers, 12,000; kimono cutters, 3,000; white goods workers, 20,000; waist and dressmakers, 30,000.

The order to strike today was an answer to the employers' ultimatum that, after only open shops would be tolerated in the garment trade. Miss Gertrude Barnum, general organizer of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union took general charge of the new strike. One of her chief lieutenants is Miss Josephine Casey, who was imprisoned in Kalamazoo last Summer for activities in the corset makers' strike. She is also assisted by Miss Carolina Dexter.

The heartrending stories told by the striking girls have interested many women of wealth, who are doing what they can to alleviate their troubles. Mrs. John Elliot of the Women's Trade Union League, formed a committee, which visited the halls where the girls meet and organized staging parties.

Maurice Asinoff, a knee pants manufacturer, of No. 8 Wooster street, received a letter from Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, in which she said she would accept his invitation to inspect the garment factories as soon as she could find opportunity.

A number of prominent ministers addressed a strike meeting in Beethoven Hall. Bishop Greer, kept away by another pressing engagement, will talk to the girls in the near future.

COLEMAN AGAIN TO QUIT JAIL AS BANK WITNESS

George W. Coleman, the young bookkeeper of the defunct National City Bank of Cambridge, who is serving a fifteen years' sentence in jail at Greenfield, for larceny from the bank in conjunction with William J. (Big Bill) Kelher, is to be brought to Boston tomorrow to testify in connection with the settlement of the tangled affairs of the former institution.

Former Governor Bates was appointed receiver of the bank after it was closed and absorbed by another bank. He has been trying to realize as much from the wreckage as possible for the depositors and has sought to hold the directors of the bank responsible for the defalcation.

"From your druggist get half ounce of Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine) and two ounces of Glycerine; but them two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey; shake well and use in doses of one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime." Smaller doses to children according to age. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it he will quickly get it. Many mixtures are of large quantity and cheaper, but it is risky to experiment. This formula comes from a reliable doctor and is certain. This was first published here six years ago and local druggists say it has been in constant demand ever since. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago. —Advertisement.

HAIR STOPS FALLING, DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS—25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Save your Hair! Beautify it! Invigorate your scalp! Danderine grows hair and we can prove it.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable softness, gloss and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

LIFE ON $8 A WEEK ALL WORK, NO PLAY AND LITTLE FOOD, SAYS GIRL

That living on $8 a week or less is not impossible, and indeed is quite an easy thing is the tone of some of the new letters written to the Boston AMERICAN. Scores of letters reach the AMERICAN office daily.

The letters continue to be interesting and highly instructive. Hundreds of young women in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont are considering the question of leaving home to start life in a big city. The problem of living is serious. Here are a few letters depicting the ex-

All Work and No Play.

Editor AMERICAN:

I have been an interested reader of the letters of the working girls as to whether a girl can live on $8 per week. I must say that I don't think a girl can live on $8 per week—she may be able to exist. But there is a vast difference between eking out an existence and living.

How few girls can afford to have a good luncheon. A girl who works in a store or an office must make a fairly good appearance. If she is only receiving $8 per week she must deny herself something in order to do it. She will save on her luncheon. She can afford no amusements unless it is a moving picture show. She must be dependent on someone else to furnish her amusements. All work and no play is not good for any one.

Dorchester. O. J. S.

Easy in Small City.

Editor AMERICAN:

I work in a store and get eight dollars a week. A girl can live on eight dollars a week. Here is my way: A comfortable room (I mean warm) $2.50
Meals 3.75
Washing ..... .50

For clothes put a little pleasure $1.15 is left, if one is lucky, and can get in a private family board is for about five dollars a week. My washing is about 60 cents, and for clothes and pleasure $2.40. That is for a small city like Haverhill. I guess it would be harder in Boston. Y. S. Haverhill.

Advertise for Rooms.

Editor AMERICAN:

Why don't some of these girls put an ad in the paper if they cannot get a room for less than $2.50 and $3 a week? I did that and found just what I wanted for $1.50 a week. I worked in North Cambridge and I managed to get my room out there. That did away with carfare. I made from $7 to $8 a week. It cost $3 for my meals in a big boarding house. I had the best of everything three times a day. Fifty cents for my washing and ironing. I didn't wear white skirts or light dresses. I could not afford to.

Providence. M. J. C.

Sent Money Home.

Editor AMERICAN:

My Winter jacket never cost more than $10 and was good and warm. My girls did nicely on $3.40 a week and some of them did with less clothes and saved money to send home. There are a great many things a girl can do if she only tries and remember to look on the bright side of things, and she cannot fail to get along well—and enjoy life, remembering to always keep good company.

H. M. L.

Cambridge.

She Lives on $5.

Editor AMERICAN:

Girls can live on $5 a week. I am a girl, seventeen years old, and I earn $5 a week and can live on it. Here is how I do it: The woman I live with is a good woman and she takes $3.50 for my board and room. I only spend twenty-five cents for amusements and $1 a week for clothing. The twenty-five cents I have left over I save for fear of not having work, for sometimes they lay us off, and everything helps when you are a poor working girl.

Springfield. S. H.

When She Went to the City.

Editor AMERICAN:

Two years ago my friend and I went to the city to work in a factory and found $8 a week sufficient for a good living and a good time. We roomed together and paid $4.25 apiece for our room. We took two meals out which cost $3 a week and the other meal we managed in our room. And together my room and board came up to about $5 a week, leaving me $3 for clothing and outings. I would like to advise every girl who goes into a strange city to work not to go alone, because being two they can share the cost of a room and find much pleasure in company.

MISS L. L.

Belmont, N. H., January 13, 1913.

Saved on $3.40 a Week.

Editor AMERICAN:

My home was in a small country town, and hearing of the mills at C—, Massachusetts, I with some other girls, just out of school, went there to work. We were paid $3.40, and lived at a small boarding house, we had our room, board and the use of the laundry for $2.50 a week. All for me say the board was good. There was a warm sitting room we could all use in common.

I got one good dress a year for $6, and a good Winter hat costing $4.50, which lasted two seasons. A Sunday hat cost $2.50, and lasted one or two seasons. I always had a pair of nice shoes and gloves, which I kept for best, the shoes costing $3 and the gloves $1.50. For Summer dresses I got pretty muslins and ginghams and made them plain and neat. These dresses cost from seven to 10 cents a yard.

When there was a church fair I went, and once in a while to a concert in the evening. Sunday evenings I attended a temperance meeting by the Y. M. C. A., or a prayer meeting at the church. In the Summer I went to parks Saturday afternoons, or for a walk. During the year I saved enough to take a trip home, costing $17. The secret is, use reason in buying, take good care of what you buy, and wear it as long as possible. Be kind and always willing to help others, and pray for the best in all things, and believe in them, and you will be happy even as a working girl.

STRIKERS READY FOR EVICTION IN WEST WARREN

WEST WARREN, Jan. 15. — Polish strikers at the Theradike Manufacturing Company's cotton mills prepared today for eviction, following the threat made by the company last Saturday that if they didn't go to work they would be put out of the corporation cottages.

The police are ready for trouble if eviction is attempted. Following a riot at one of the mill gates last night, Deputy Sheriff Walter A. Putnam and E. A. Hixon and twenty-five police said they would check the first sign of disorder.

Walter B. Hall, agent of the corporation, whose removal has been demanded by the strikers, said at the company offices in Boston today that the eviction threat was only a "bluff."

The following telephone talk took place between Agent Hall and the AMERICAN:

"Are you going to evict strikers tomorrow?"

"Don't know anything about any eviction."

"It was reported that eviction notice had been served on the strikers?"

"Been no legal notice served."

"What gave rise to eviction reports?"

"There was only a verbal notice, that was all."

"Well, among some mill employes wouldn't a verbal notice give as much of a scare as a legal one?"

"That was meant only for a bluff—just told 'em to go to work or get out."

"Suppose they don't go to work, going to put them out?"

"Don't know yet."

"It is reported that some of the employes are so poor that the children go barefoot, even in Winter and walk away on the ground."

"They don't have to. Some of the men go barefoot from choice."

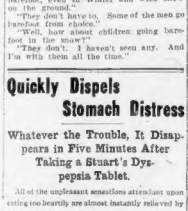
"Well, how about children going barefoot in the snow?"

"They don't. I haven't seen any. And I'm with them all the time."

Quickly Dispels Stomach Distress

Whatever the Trouble, It Disappears in Five Minutes After Taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

All of the unpleasant sensations attendant upon eating too heartily are almost instantly relieved by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.



Heaviness of the Stomach from Undigested Food Quickly Relieved by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

When you take food into your stomach that is fried and over-cased, the gastric juices do not form as e nough to digest it properly. So the food becomes sour and at once begins to throw off gases. Your stomach becomes inflated just as surely as if you attached a toy balloon to a gas jet. Then the gases and foul odors issue forth and pollute your breath. Your tongue quickly becomes coated and you can taste the foulness that is within you.

Now all this condition is changed almost instantly by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. The little digester gets busy at once—supplies all the digestive elements that were lacking—digests the food in a jiffy and sweetens and refreshes the mucous lining of the stomach and bowels and restores peace and content.

One grain of a single ingredient in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This saves your stomach and gives it the rest it needs. All muscles require occasional rest if they are ever over-taxed. The stomach is no exception to this rule.

Try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will wonder how you ever got along without them. They are sold at 50 cents by all druggists everywhere.

WOMAN EXPOSES REAL SLAVERY IN N. Y. IRON MINES

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—A woman first brought to light the shocking industrial conditions in the iron mines of the Wellers-Sheldon Company at Mineville, Essex county, where peonage in its worst form is said to enslave 1,000 workers and led to Senator Griffin's determination to bring the matter before the Senate.

Miss Frances A. Keller, chief investigator of the State Department of Labor, went to Mineville on May 17, and upon her return told of conditions that equaled in horror the worst that were uncovered in the Florida turpentine camps. Intimidation, cruelty and extortion were among her findings.

Miss Keller demanded the resignations of Justices of the Peace John Navin of Mineville and Fred Bing of Port Henry, whom she charged with swindling the foreign laborers by fake conspiracy.

She also learned that it was a common practice for workers to be forced to pay a bonus to Superintendent Dugan to live in miserable shacks of the company. This was in addition to their rent, which was exorbitant.

TEN DIE IN WRECK OF CALIFORNIA ON ENGLISH COAST

SOUTH SHIELDS, Eng., Jan. 15.—Ten sailors were drowned today when a ship was wrecked a mile in the North Sea off the Northumberland coast. Coast guards rescued eight of the crew of eighteen. The rescued were too exhausted to tell the name of the vessel, but wreckage washed ashore showed that the name of the wrecked ship was the California.

LONELY WOMEN SEEK BABIES FOR ADOPTION

"Baby Gordon," that round-faced, towaled-haired little boy whose picture was published in the AMERICAN on Sunday and Tuesday, will change his residence within a few days.

Of course you know that his mother wants some kind and loving woman to adopt him. Just twenty-two women want the honor. They wrote to the Boston AMERICAN and requested an interview with Baby Gordon's mother. All the letters have been forwarded and the young woman may take her choice concerning the person whom she desires to adopt her boy.

Baby X has shared honors for popularity with the Gordon boy. Many letters ask for Baby X. Several persons who want Babie B, Y and G.

The story in Saturday's AMERICAN describing now two hundred babies were to be given away by Gordon Boston mothers struck a responsive chord in the hearts of childless women.

Although the mothers of these tots admit conditions are such they cannot support their babies, they cannot insert information are willing to assume the duties of motherhood, and adopt the little ones.

The AMERICAN can merely forward these letters to the mothers.

If the woman by Gordon finds somebody in whom she places absolute trust she can, through the Probate Court, have adoption papers issued which gives full surrender of the child to the woman selected.

A woman living in the Back Bay district writes:

I am a great reader of your paper, and in reading the Sunday issue I learned that there are many babies to be given away. My home is childless, and I should like to adopt one of those you have pictured in the paper. My first choice is Baby Gordon and second choice Baby X. My husband and dearly love children. We would give one a good home.

The picture of Baby X attracted as much notice as that of Baby Gordon. Here is another person who wants Baby X. In her letter she says:

Enclosed you will find picture of Baby X, clipped from Sunday AMERICAN. I want the child. Can you furnish me with full particulars soon? Is it pretty?

And here is another request from Fall River. The writer is not particular, but would of course like Baby Gordon. There is something about the picture of this sturdy little fellow that struck a responsive chord in the hearts of many women. The letter says:

Will you kindly give me full particulars about the babies who are to be given away? I have a comfortable home and no children. My husband and I fell in love with Baby Gordon. Of course I want adoption papers taken out, because I would not want to part with him. I will love the baby as my own

The Temptations of a Working Girl

By Hal Reade

A Thrilling Story of the Trials of a Beautiful Girl in a Great City

"AND while neither one of them has invited me I shall be one of the guests," said Wharton, with pretended indifference.

"For heaven's sakes, there, sir; the electrocution is a public matter and one which your credentials allow you to see. The wedding is a private function and I propose to see that it is a sacred one. Every one will be excluded but their closest friends. You, sir, among the number. The gentleman is ready to go, Colligan," said the Warden, turning on his heel.

"This way, sir," called the guard brusquely.

Wharton followed the guard out of the door, as the Warden told his assistants to admit a prisoner who had a complaint to make.

Time and not gone well with poor Dick Malone. Katie Carrigan was sorely disappointed in not marrying him. Desire for vengeance had fonowed her love for him, and she had told her story to a young lawyer. As he was more eager to make a name for himself than to earn his fee, he had persuaded her to begin a suit against him for breach of promise of marriage. Dickie was found guilty, and ordered by the Court to pay her $100 damages.

Dickie in Sing Sing

To Dickie this sum was a fortune, and to raise it Dickie adopted means that were not strictly according to law. In fact, he had stolen the money. He was arrested and sentenced to Sing Sing.

Dickie was the prisoner the guard brought before the warden.

He wore the stripes of a prisoner as he handed a card to the head of the prison.

"Here's my card, sir."

"You have persuasion to come to my office," said the warden, glancing at Dickie.

"I've that have you to say."

Dickie looked at him with awe. He gulped once or twice before he was able to say anything. Then he gasped, "Well, all I have to say is that the rooms in your home are very small and the food is very bad."

"I am in nowise to blame for your being here," said the warden coldly, "and you will find that complaints will only prejudice you in bad odor. Strict obedience to the rules will make things much better for you. What are you here for?"

Dick kept turning his cap nervously in his hands. With a peculiar little shrug of his shoulders he answered, "Breach of promise."

"Nonsense," said the warden with a smile. "Breach of promise is not a prison offence. What are you here for?"

"For stealing $35 to pay Katie's damages."

The warden was surprised. He knew many reasons why a man was sent to Sing Sing, but this was a new one to him.

"Katie's damages?" he asked. "Who is Katie's damages?"

Dick ducked his head and then, looking at the warden, replied sheepishly, "Katie Carrigan sued me for a breach of promise. The jury gave her a hundred dollars damages. I haven't no hundred and I pinched the $35 to pay on account. Then they pinch me, tried me, and here I am a living monument of a woman's perfidy."

"Did you ask to see me to tell me that?"

"No, father—I mean warden—I came to ask you to make me job."

The warden picked up papers lying on the desk. He wished to end this interview as quickly as possible. "Where are you working?" he snapped.

"In the shoe shop, sir," replied Dick.

"Why, that is a nice airy shop, and not much hard work."

"I know that, sir, but I have to work with leathers and the smell reminds me of boxing gloves and boxing gloves reminds me of the time I was training to meet Nelson, and I got knocked out with a single punch.

"Oh, then you are an athlete," said the warden.

Dickie straightened up proudly in his remembrance of his former triumphs. "I was de champeen scrapper of the ward."

"And you don't like the food here?" said the warden, taking up the second cause of his complaint. "It's not good enough for you, eh?"

"The food is bad," replied Dick with feeling.

The warden turned to the guard who had been standing waiting to take Dick back to the shoeshop. "Take him away, guard," he said. "Put him to breaking pig iron in the foundry."

When Dick heard the order he almost fainted with surprise and disgust. "What's that!" he gasped. "Say, warden, when I comes to tink it over, the food is good and de job in de shoeshop is great."

The warden did not answer him, but signalled to allow the prisoner to retire. The guard had walked over to take Dickie back when the door opened and Katie Carrigan entered. She carried an envelope in her hand. Her surprise at seeing Dick was as great as Dick's when he heard the warden's orders. For a moment her old love battled with her delight at seeing Dick in a place where she had often wished to see him if he had forsaken her.

"Dick, what is the matter with you? You look almost a felon in this strue," she said to the unhappy prisoner.

"Who are you, young woman, and what are you doing here?" asked the warden sternly.

Glad He's in Prison

Katie handed him the envelope and turned again to feast her eyes on Dick.

The warden read the letter through, and turning to her said, "One of Jack Fallon's friends, I see, and the man who has the wedding. That is all right, the prisoners are not allowed to speak to any one."

Dick lifted his eyes to Heaven and with a voice full of thankfulness said: "Thank goodness, I'm in prison."

"Don't say that, Dickie Malone," reproved Katie in a low voice.

Pointing to Dick, she said to the warden: "He is the man who has stolen away my heart; ruined my life and threw me down. Now I see him in stripes. My heart calls out to him, but his cruel song is singing again; Dickie—Dickie—I love you. Is there no chance that I can get Dickie out, mister?"

"Only by executive clemency," was the answer.

"How much does it cost and where do you get it?" the girl asked eagerly.

"It costs nothing and you get it at Albany from the head of the prison," explained the warden.

"Can the Governor let Dickie go?"

"He can if he cares to," said the warden.

"That settles it," replied Katie, with determination. "Dickie, go back to your cage. I'm going to Albany to get—what ever you may call it."

"It is not necessary," explained the warden. "The Governor will be here today and you may see him; you know I have his carriage at the door. Wait for him here, Guard, take the prisoner away."

Katie sad down on the chair and patiently waited for the Governor. The warden had taken an interest in the poor girl's story and explained to the Governor on his arrival what he was all about. The State entered the warden's office he called Katie to him. She told him of her own love affair and its unhappy ending.

She Intercedes for Dick

"Dickie didn't mean anything wrong," she said in ending her account. "He was just afraid of me, that was all, because I knocked him out with a punch."

The Governor could not restrain a smile at the eagerness of the young woman.

"But he stole the money did he not?" he asked.

"Let me tell you about that," said Katie, laying her hand on his arm. "The money was stolen from my mother. It was a put-up job."

"A put-up job! What do you mean?" asked the Governor.

"It was this way," she explained, earnestly. "I had my judgment and I knew that Dickie could never pay the hundred, so I got my mother to lend me the money. I lay down the money by Dickie, and then tell that she was going out, and that if he was in the house he would get the money, even if she had to steal it."

"Well," replied the Governor, not comprehending fully Katie's scheme.

"Oh, don't you see?" said Katie, disdainfully. "I wanted him to pay it, as my wounded honor could be painted white, and then it all came out." The payment of it would square me before the other girls, and then we could get married."

"You swore that he had stolen this," said the governor, recollecting the charge upon which Dick had been convicted.

"Yes," said Katie with a sigh. "but that was because I saw him on the Bowery with Maggie Casey, and in the heat of my jealousy I swore he took it from us."

The Governor looked at the girl sympathetically. He began to understand the curious turns of human passion, which is the same whether the woman wears silks and satins or be only a cigarette girl and wears a white shirtwaist and a black skirt.

"Be very careful what you are saying," the Governor replied. "You are confessing to perjury."

"What's that?" asked Katie anxiously.

"You are swearing to a lie," said the Governor.

"That is nothing to the way I was feeling then," replied Katie. "I would have sworn to a rack of lies."

"From what you now say the boy is innocent."

"Of course he is. Now, then, Governor, I want to make a bargain with you."

"And what is that?"

Katie had taken the Governor's hand and, looking him in the eye, said: "You let Dickie go and we'll get married and I'll name my oldest boy after you."

The Governor laughed and replied: "That's a bargain. I shall never object to diverting an innocent man."

"Thank you," said Katie, kissing his hand. "Good-by, I'm going to meet Maggie and the rest," she said, as she left the room.

JACK FALLON had been a model prisoner in Sing Sing. He was permitted more liberties than are accorded usually to men under sentence of death.

The warden had known his father in boyhood days. Though found guilty, many believed in his innocence. Early in the day the warden had visited him in his cell. Jack had risen and carefully dressed for the marriage when the warden entered his cell. He shook him heartily by the hand and said:

"I see you are dressed for the ceremony, Jack."

"Yes, warden," he replied with a smile. "It is not often that a man knows that his wedding clothes will be his burial shroud. But such, in the wisdom of God, is my fate. Of course, I cannot see it now. But, thank God, through the teachings of my good old mother, I can bow my head and say, 'His will be done.'"

Ready for Death Chair

"Jack, I knew your father," said the warden, sympathetically. "You Fallons and I were school boys together. I knew him as a boy and as an honest, steady, sober man, and while you are to die, and mine is the hand to send you to death, I believe you are innocent."

The warden and the condemned man grasped hands heartily.

"Thank you, warden. You are not to blame; you are only doing your duty, and I know that it will be a hard one. I am glad to die, warden. But it is the disgrace, the awful disgrace, which grieves me to earth." Tears sprang into Jack's eyes.

"You must be brave, Jack."

"I tell you I am right, Mr. Watson. Why, what did that jury do? They deliberated—for a few minutes—as to whether I should live or die. Then they left it to Almighty gave me. He alone can give life. He alone should have the right to take it away."

"But there are men actually guilty of awful murders. What of them, Jack?" asked the warden.

"Lock them up for life," replied Jack. "They will then be beyond the power of harming anyone, and in solitary confinement will atone for their crimes."

"I may be that you are right, my boy, but the law is the law and it must be obeyed."

The warden was not inclined to argue the point, however, well made it was.

"He that as it may. My time is set, and wasn I go before the Great Judge of all he will know I am innocent. Warden, my papers came the other day. You remember, the papers granting the patent on my chair making device. You have them in your desk."

"Yes, Jack," said the warden, glad to turn the topic of conversation.

"Did you have the patent and its rights and all its income transferred to Mamie?" asked Jack.

Makes Mamie Her Heir

"Yes, I did, Jack. It is attested and all its rights now in your name. You have brought the papers with me for your signature."

"I had intended half for Mamie, half for my mother, but this disgrace killed her. I was sitting in a cell the day they buried her, and I will swear that the Heavens opened and I saw the throne."

Jack stood with bowed head.

"Yes, Jack, your mother was a good woman. I have known her all my life," replied the warden, feelingly.

"She is at rest, thank God. Mamie—my poor little Mamie—I want you to promise me, warden, that you will look after her when I am gone," said Jack.

"I will, Jack. There will be no man's my own daughter."

"That's all right, sir, and when the time comes it will make it easier to know that it is the hand of a friend which pulls the lever and the hand of a man who believes me innocent," said Jack, seating himself at the table and signing the papers.

The warden left the cell with the will of Jack Fallon. He made Mamie his heir. While in prison he had patented a machine for making chairs, which had been bought at once by a great chair making company at a sum which would make Mamie a comparatively rich girl. It was these papers he was glancing over when Dick Malone had asked him to change his job. He had turned to them again while Katie was having her interview with the Governor.

When she left the room the Governor turned to him and said: "How are you, Warden?" grasping his hand again heartily. It was the first time in the day that the two men had met alone and they were fast friends.

"Very well, Governor, and glad to see you," replied the Warden. "I shall be glad to have you inspect the prison."

"I was sorry to see by the papers that my oversight in the matter of electrocuting when a man was to be electrocuted. But today is the only one I could spare," said the Governor.

"You will not see him, Governor. I shall be very careful of that," explained the Warden.

"I shall see him, Warden, if you please. I was compelled by weight of evidence to refuse commutation to Fallon. But now that I am here I may be able to say a word of comfort to him before he dies."

"You are a brave man, Governor," Warden Watson replied.

"I have never been afraid, Warden, to do what I consider my duty." The Governor could not avoid, even with friends, the chance to talk as he did on the stump.

"Do you approve my allowing a marriage here today? You know about it," asked the Warden, anxiously. He had been criticised freely for his decision.

"I approve of it emphatically. Poor young people, but if it will do them any good, let us always temper Justice with mercy," replied the Governor.

120 BACK BAY FAMILIES JOIN TO FIGHT H. C. L.

Back Bay residents living on Chestnut, Mt. Vernon, Brimmer, Beacon, West Cedar and the adjacent streets, in their fight against the high cost of living, will open a co-operative store either on Charles or Chestnut street, where food, coal, wood and other necessities will be sold.

One hundred and fifty of the wealthiest families are to be admitted and later on probably others will come in.

The decision to enlarge from thirty to 150 families comes as the result of the success of the Charles River Co-operative Store which is located on Line street and which is in charge of Mrs. Joseph Linder, Sunday wife of the artist of that name of Mt. Vernon street; Henry Copley Greene of Chestnut street and Matthew Hale of Charles River square. Mrs. Smith is the active field purchaser for the co-operative concern and spends much of her time visiting among the farmers securing contracts for fresh eggs, poultry and other farm supplies.

The co-operative movement among these Back Bay people grew out of a small beginning launched in the front parlor of Mrs. R. A. Cram's No. 52 Chestnut street, where boxes of chickens were originally received, opened and weighed out for fashionable neighbors in front of the fireplace. Mrs. Cram holding the scales while either Mrs. Hale or Mrs. Green packed out the chickens. Later the co-operative business grew too big for the Crams' front parlor and had to leave Line street. Now it has grown too big for the little Lime street store.

The engine passed over the switch all right, but four cars took the siding and crashed into a freight car, two of the express cars and a freight car being demolished. One man in the first express car was considerably bruised and all others on the train were shaken up. Traffic was delayed until 6:45, this morning, when the track was cleared.

READVILLE IS NOT MEMBER OF GRAND CIRCUIT

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 15.—At the annual meeting of the stewards of the Grand Circuit a number of changes were made in the racing schedule for trotters and pacers on the "Big Line" for 1913.

New York was taken into the circuit, and Readville, Mass., where many famous races have been held in the past, was dropped from the schedule.

There were four applications for membership in the Grand Circuit schedule for 1912, but New York and Windsor were the only successful applicants. The Grand Circuit racers will appear at the Empire Track, New York, from August 25 to 30.

It was some time before the stewards agreed to admit New York into the Grand Circuit. R. M. Williams, representing the Greater New York Fair and Racing Association, which organization made application for admission to the circuit at the annual session, stated that the organization had secured a ten-year lease of the Empire track, and desired to hold a ten-day meeting.

The representative of the New York organization asked for dates beginning August 28. This conflicted with the plans of the Readville organization. Much argument followed and the stewards finally dropped Readville and substituted New York. The Readville track is one of the most famous in the country, but the poor racing during the past few seasons have not been well attended.

The dates announced follow:

Windsor, Ont., June 30-July 4; Cleveland, July 7-12; Pittsburgh, July 14-19; Buffalo, July 21-26; Grand Rapids, July 28-August 2; Kalamazoo, August 4-9; Detroit, August 11-16; Providence, August 18-23; New York, City, August 25-30; Hartford, September 1-6; Syracuse, September 8-13; Detroit (Michigan State Fair), September 15-20; Columbus, September 22-October 4; Lexington, Ky., October 6-18.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

WITH all the swapping of players that is constantly going on in the big leagues it is a curious fact that the Red Sox won the American League pennant with a team of men that John I. Taylor had gathered from the colleges and minor leagues. His scouts had raked the country from Minnesota to Texas and from Maine to California, and the men he signed, in his judgment, were the ones that brought the flag to Boston.

Not one of the regulars came from another big league club in a trade, with the possible exception of Jake Stahl. In this case Stahl was a member of the Boston American League club before he played with Washington and New York. He joined Jimmy Collins' team away back in 1903 after graduating from the University of Illinois. He can be said to be a Red Sox find, although it is true he played on two other big league clubs before he finally returned to Boston.

Another member of the team, not a regular, was also acquired through the scrap route. This was Claude Hugh, who was secured from the New York Americans.

ALSO the New York Giants are a striking instance of the fact that a great team can be developed without the constant swapping that seems to be a mania with some managers. Of all the men who played for McGraw against the Red Sox in the World's Series, there was not a man with the possible exception of Red Murray and Charlie Herzog, but what was dug up by McGraw and his scouts from the minor leagues and developed by the clever little New York manager. In the case of Herzog, he was originally a Giant recruit. Later he was traded to the Boston Nationals, but McGraw kept his eye on him and got him back when the opportunity arose. Murray was acquired in a swap with St. Louis.

THE strong team that represents Philadelphia in the American League is an organization built up by Connie Mack, not by trades, but from colleges and from the minors. Barring Lord and Thomas all of the players, as the writer recalls them, came to Mack undeveloped. The Washington team, as it stands now, is not an organization gathered by means of trades in major league players, but is a team of youngsters secured from the minors. There may be a player or two, such as Catcher Williams and Long Tom Hughes who have had major league experience on other clubs.

Thus we find the three leading teams in the American League and the leading club of the National League made up of players secured from the minors and the colleges—young players, in other words. It would seem as if that was the proper way to secure pennant-winning material. If one big league club endeavors to land a big league player from a rival big league club there is usually something the matter with the player or the swap never would be made.

Take it by and large, therefore, the way to build up a winning ball club is first secure the right kind of a manager and then keep everlastingly searching for young material. Of course a swap for an old and so-called experienced player is all right once in a while. Occasionally it is absolutely necessary.

"BASEBALL is in its infancy," declared Charlie Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn Club, upon a historic occasion. Said historic occasion was the baseball banquet the Pittsburg Club gave at the Waldorf Astoria when the team won the pennant three years ago. Ebbets was called on for a speech and he began by saying very feebly, "Baseball is in its infancy." He then gained strength as the banquet hall and repeated the assertion. Clearing his throat he announced for the third time that baseball was in its infancy. Finally, after a most painful pause, Ebbets made the same assertion, for the fourth time and sat down amid the deafening cheers of 300 guests.

What Mr. Ebbets lacked as a finished speaker he made up in power of prophecy. We have all read how the Chinese and Japanese have taken up our national game, but it has only recently come to light that baseball is beginning to boom in Australia, beyond the wildest dreams of the manufacturers of baseballs.

CHARLES C. SPINE, editor of a baseball publication in St. Louis, has just returned from a visit to the antipodes and this is what he says:

"Australians only await an invasion from a big American baseball team to surrender all other sports, cricket included, to our national game. I predict that the enthusiasm over baseball in Cuba, Japan, the Philippine Islands, and the Philippines, will be mild compared with the boom that awaits the game among the Australians.

"The result of the visit is that Charles A. Comiskey, who has talked of taking his White Sox to Australia next December, will be assured that he will make no mistake, but I will warn him that he is likely to lose some of his players. The natives may make things so pleasant for them that those who haven't strong home ties are likely to desert and remain to teach the Australians the obscure points of the inside game.

"I got no farther than Sydney, but was assured there that conditions as I found them were practically duplicated in Melbourne, the other big city of the Island Continent, and that over in Tasmania also I would find the same thing —baseball taking a wonderful hold, players rapidly developing and big crowds turning out to cheer them on.

"The impression I got while in Australia is ripe for baseball, hungry for it, in fact. I believe that the professional game operated on lines that would not interfere with the amateur organization, could be made to go big. The test of his opinion may come if Comiskey takes the contemplated trip next Winter.

"The season was still in full blast in Honolulu when I landed there, five leagues playing Saturday and Sunday games and all nationalities inlike baseball in as many languages as there were teams, for the Chinese have one, the Portuguese one, the Japs another, the native Hawaiians one, and the Americans number."

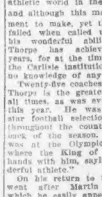
INDIAN THORPE BEST ATHLETE IN THE WORLD

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter Mile Champion of United States and Canada).



Once in a while across the vista of passing years, a dying race startles those who are mourning it for its shroud by giving a kick that upsets the entire funeral proceedings. As if in objection to the obituary being written before the demise is complete, the Indian has chosen the most vitally active pursuit in the life of his paleface traducer in which to demonstrate that he is yet very much a live one.

Four years ago James E. Thorpe entered the Carlisle Indian school from Prague, Oklahoma, with no knowledge of letters, or athletics other than the smallest street urchin would have in one of our large cities. Thorpe also had no outward signs to denote that he was any different from the hundreds of other Indians entering there. He did not even have the name Jim Thorpe then, as that was attached to him later instead of his original name.

Thorpe King of Athletes.

Today Thorpe is without a peer in the athletic world in the majority of sports, and although this may be a broad statement to make, yet the Indian has never failed when called upon to demonstrate his wonderful ability as an athlete. Thorpe has achieved all this in four years, for at the time of his entrance at the Carlisle institution he had absolutely no knowledge of any branch of athletics. Twenty-five coaches unite in saying that Thorpe is the greatest football player of all times, as was evidenced by his work last year. He was chosen on all the star football selections of the critics throughout the country as the star halfback of the season. His greatest work was at the Olympic games in Sweden, where the King of that country shook hands with him, saying, "You are a wonderful athlete."

On his return to this country, Thorpe went after Martin Sheridan's record, which he easily annexed. At the annual Brown and Carlisle game this year it was announced the Thorpe would never compete again in New England.

This is true, as far as football playing is concerned, but the Indian has aspirations to become a big league pitcher, although his trainer, Glenn Warner, and other influential persons in athletics, are trying to have him change his mind. They want him to remain an amateur.

LURICH IS WINNER OVER LEMLE IN BATTLE ON MAT

George Lurich, the Russian wrestler, defeated Carlo Lemle, the Bohemian "perfect man," in Mechanics Building last night. Lurich won two straight falls at catch-as-catch-can style. The first fall was secured in nineteen minutes, thirty-eight seconds, and the second fall in eleven minutes, forty-five seconds.

It was a case of two strong men, with one of them having more knowledge of the game than the other. That they are genuine strong men they displayed before the mat, as well as while they were wrestling.

"3 to one" Burns had a hard time winning from Charles Lenger, the German wrestler, in the opening bout. The "Cyclone" won the first fall in twenty-two minutes, fifteen seconds and the second ran to fifteen minutes, five seconds. At times the work of the men brought the crowd to its feet, it was so exciting.

Dr. Ben Roller, who met Tom Sayers of England, a descendent of the famous heavyweight boxing champion, had a lot of trouble in throwing the Englishman. The latter substituted for Vincent, who failed to keep his contract. Roller won the first fall in nineteen minutes, twenty-five seconds and the second fall in twenty-five minutes, thirty-seven seconds.

RILEY'S COLUMN

"A BASEBALL player ought to be at his best between thirty and thirty-five," said James R. McAleer today, "and he ought to save $30,000 while in baseball."

The author of the aforesaid ought to be some authority on the subject, because he was playing the game about that age. Moreover, being chief mogul of the champions of the world, his observations concerning diamond athletes ought to carry weight.

If McAleer's remark is actually true, then baseball is unquestionably the best of all outdoor sports, so far as the players thereof are concerned. In no other branch of athletics can a man, as a rule, stand the strain after, say, twenty-seven or twenty-eight, and nearly all of them begin to go back at about thirty. And how many men have saved $30,000 at the age of thirty-five?

* * *

"OF course a man isn't so fast after thirty as he was before," added the Red Sox president. "But he has learned to think by that time, and he should be more valuable to his club after thirty than before—always provided he has taken care of himself."

* * *

AS evidence McAleer might mention Jimmy Archer, the Cub premier catcher, who is regarded as one of the best there is, and is thirty this summer; "Chief" Bender, who will be thirty next May, and who is still some "chief," notwithstanding he hasn't taken good care of himself as an athlete should; Al Bridwell, who is thirty-two; Mordecai Brown, thirty-seven; Jimmy Callahan, thirty-three; Frank Chance, thirty-four; Hal Chase, thirty; Fred Clarke, forty-one, and who was playing manager of the Pirates until after he was thirty-nine; "Cliff" Cravath, thirty-one; Sam Crawford, thirty-three; "Birdie" Cree, thirty-one; Harry Davis, thirty-six; Jim Delahanty, who hop pat the Athletics on their feet again at forty; "Red" Doolin, thirty-three; Pat Dougherty, who was doing things at thirty-five; "Kid" Elberfeld, who is thirty-seven; Johnny Evers, thirty; Russell Ford, thirty; Artie Hofman, thirty-one; Hughie Jennings, forty-three; Johnny Kling, thirty-eight; Tommy Leach, thirty-six; "Dutch" Leonard, thirty; Larry Lajoie, thirty-eight; Christy Mathewson, who pitched the best game in his career last October, when he was just past thirty-two; McBride, thirty-two; Matty McIntyre, thirty-one; Mike Mitchell, thirty; Earl Moore, thirty-four; Mike Mowrey, thirty; George Mullin, thirty-three; Eddie Plank, thirty-eight; Ed Reulbach, thirty-one; Lew Richie, thirty; Frank Schulte, thirty-one; Admiral Schlei, credited with thirty-four years, but who, they say, is two years older; "Gabby" Street, thirty; our own Jake Stahl, thirty-four; Ira Thomas, thirty-two; Joe Tinker, thirty; Honus Wagner, thirty-nine.

* * *

MCALEER might mention tobese, but he would immediately start a dispute, if he did—a dispute as to whether all, or the most of these, were not better before thirty than after, and whether, after thirty, they were not "going back." In fact, it is very likely that, without mentioning names, McAleer HAS started a Winter dispute already. Let's see what happens now that he has dropped a little argument for the "fans."

"IS a baseball player at his best between thirty and thirty-five?"

* * *

THE Sox president made this remark during a conversation in which he was asked how much he thought a big league baseball player ought to save during his career on the diamond. McAleer put the figure at some $30,000. The average life of a ball player who takes care of himself, in the big leagues, is not much more than ten years. Most of them enter about twenty-two, and few survive beyond thirty-two or thereabouts. A man ought to make about $3,500 a year; an exceptionally good one more—up to maybe $5,000 to $7,000 or $8,000—after he becomes a star. There are many frugal ball players, and McAleer's figures must be based upon the ability of those fellows to save two-thirds or three fourths of their baseball salaries, earning enough in Winter to make up the balance of the cost of living.

LARRY PAPE IS SOLD TO BISONS BY THE RED SOX

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 15.—One of the world's champion Red Sox retirees became a Bison when Manager Clymer of the Buffalo club bought the release of Larry Pape from President McAleer of the Red Sox. The purchase was outright.

For the past few weeks reports have come from Boston that Pape was due for Joe Tinker's Reds. Buffalo has been after the twirler for the past two months and it is said that the Redland reporter hurried Manager Clymer to close the deal.

Pape was used but little by the Red Sox last season, for with Wood, O'Brien, Bedient, Hall and Collins going good he had little chance. He is a pitcher who has to be used regularly to do his best and it is understood that he requested McAleer to secure him a berth with some club that would give him a regular turn. Clymer promises to give him plenty of work.

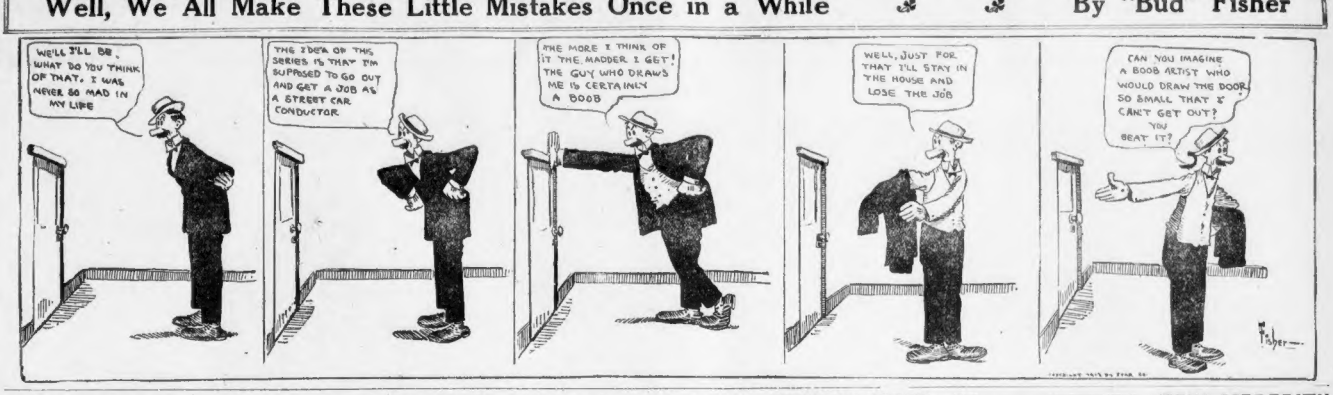
HARVARD SEVEN BATTLES TORONTO AT THE ARENA

Well, We All Make These Little Mistakes Once in a While — By "Bud" Fisher



BOARD TO PROBE SALE OF TICKETS AT RIVERS BOUT

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Fight fans today were a unit in declaring that Joe Rivers, the Los Angeles lightweight, scored a victory on points over Leach Cross, the East Side dentist, last night by virtue of his whirlwind finish in one of the greatest battles ever fought in this city.

From the tap of the gong in the first round until the fight ended in the tenth it was a slam-bang affair with both fighters going in, fighting toe to toe and using both hands with terrible effect.

Cross outboxed Rivers in the first round, scored a clean knockdown in the second, surprised the little Mexican in the third and fourth and held him even in the fifth.

Then the boy from the far West broke loose and tore into Cross with all the savage fury of a wounded tiger battering him from one side of the ring to the other for the next four rounds and winding up the battle with a cyclonic rally in the tenth that all but put Cross down and out, and which forced the New Yorker to take the worst beating of his long career.

The State Boxing Commission is investigating the charge that the house for the Cross-Rivers fight last night was oversold and sold with the knowledge of the management.

A mob of 2,000 angry fight "fans" holding tickets to the bout attacked the Arena of the Empire Athletic Club last night and, until after the fight was ended and their tickets were useless, they fought with the police reserves and the attaches of the club.

Frank S. O'Neil, boxing commissioner, who was in the crowd which was denied admission, said it was the most disorderly scene he had ever witnessed at a fight and that drastic action would be taken by the Boxing Commission today.

Most of the holders of the expensive seats, which ranged as high as $10 each, arrived late, many of them in automobiles, and when they found the doors locked they protested.

A part of the crowd gathered in Watdron's saloon adjoining the club and broke the door. Several were crowding in when a man leaped on a table and threatened to shoot the next man to enter. The crowd fell back under the threat.

COMPANY B CLAIM BASKETBALL TITLE

Because of its victory over the Woonsocket five of the South End Company B of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry of Charlestown lays claim to the State championship and will defend its title against any team in the State. Several dates still remain open and Manager Paul Alley is anxious to hear from the managers of the Notre Dames, Revere Town five, Oliver Ames A. A. of North Easton, and Campanati K of Hingham. Teams desiring games with Company B should communicate with Manager Paul Allen, No. 7 Prospect street, Charlestown.

Arlington High Is Picked to Beat Medford on Ice

Hamilton, c.		c., J. Sweetland
Lynch, p.		p., G. Kelley

The strong Arlington High hockey team will clash with Medford High at the Arena this afternoon. Arlington should prove the winner, as the men are in the best of condition and had much more practice on the ice this season than the Medford High players.

Arlington has the best hockey team among the schoolboys and from the way the men are playing at present it would not be surprising if they went through the season without being defeated.

Arlington presents a veteran lineup and the boys have been fortunate in getting a jump on the other schools by already having participated in three games at the Arena.

"Dave" Buttrick, the star goal tender on the Arlington team who was declared ineligible several weeks ago, has been reinstated in good standing by the faculty but it is not expected that he will get into the game today. Don Scully has been playing goal in the absence of Buttrick and has made a very creditable showing.

This will be the first game of the season for the Medford High players and it is not expected that they will be able to display much teamwork. The Medford hockey team suffered greatly by graduation last June and the team this year lacks experience.

NIXON WILL NOT LET KENNEDY NAME WEIGHT

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny McGann, manager of Billy Nixon of Cambridge, recently challenged Steve Kennedy of Lawrence through this column in behalf of Nixon for a bout for the lightweight championship of New England, which title is now claimed by Kennedy. The challenge was immediately accepted by Jim Crilley, who looks after the business affairs of the Lawrence battler. Crilley, however, stipulated that the weight for the contest must be 133 pounds ringside.

McGann does not believe that Kennedy has any right to dictate terms, as he says that he has no better claim to the New England lightweight title than Nixon has. In fact, Johnny is of the opinion that the boxer from the University City has made a great deal better record in the ring than Kennedy has.

Alex McLean, manager of Gilbert Gallant, is also after a bout with Kennedy for his protege. In discussing the matter today he said:

"Gallant is Kennedy's master and he proved that last week. He was robbed of the decision by a referee who was afraid to render a verdict against Kennedy for fear the 'fans' would mob him, as he himself expressed it on the way back to Boston.

"Gallant is ready to meet Kennedy again at any club in New England with the exception of the one in Lawrence. We cannot get a square deal there."

CATHEDRAL Y. M. C. A. TO HAVE TRACK MEET

The first set of track and field games under the auspices of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. will be held in Boston College "gym" Monday evening, February 24. The list of events includes a twenty-five-yard dash, a 440-yard, an 880-yard and a mile run, a scratch running high jump and a special mile race for school boys. Besides these events there will be relay races between colleges and clubs. The games are under the sanction of the A. A. U., and the events are open to all registered athletes. Entries should be sent to Terence D. Gordon, No. 70 East Newton street, Boston.

ARLINGTON K. OF C. HAS A STRONG SEVEN

The Arlington K. of C. has organized a strong hockey team composed of former star players from the Arlington High School team. Games have been arranged with some of the leading teams around Boston. The list of candidates include Bonnell, Duffy, Dineen, Tois, Wiseman, Gallagher, Doyle, Kelly, White, Sarsen, O'Neil and Horrigan. The team is under the direction of Albert Alix, formerly of Quebec. A game will be arranged later with the Hattery A team.

CHANCE SAYS HE WILL PLAY FIRST

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15.—Frank Chance, the new manager of the New York American League team, returned to his orange ranch at Glendora yesterday. He said he would leave February 4 for New York. "Will you be a bench manager?" he was asked.

"No," was the reply, "I expect to play first base some of the time. Chase and I will alternate, probably."

WOMAN PURCHASES DOG FOR $1,000

Dr. Norman T. Harris of No. 30 Village street, South End, has sold his Boston terrier, Evergreen Progenitor, a winner of blue ribbons in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Williamsport and Altoona, to Mrs. Emeline Sanborn Smith of Geelong, N. HOLY CROSS NINE TO PLAY RED SOX

Two lively games between the Red Sox and crack college nines will usher in the 1913 playing season at Fenway Park. April 8 has been reserved for Harvard and the following day for Holy Cross, according to announcement made by President James McAleer.

SCHOOLBOY
SPORT NOTES

These are busy days at the Columbus Avenue Playground. Each afternoon a big squad of school athletes are seen running around the board track, training for dual meets, the annual Boston High School meet, the big B. A. A. games. Boston College High, English High and the High School of Commerce all have squads working out on this track.

Commerce High Has Fine Track Outlook.

Coach Sherlock of the High School of Commerce has a big squad working out and he hopes to develop another championship track team. Last year Commerce won the Boston High School championship at the annual set of games at the Irvington Street Armory. Sherlock has some good athletes to work with, including Captain Elmer Smith, Walsh, Bell, Colvin, Lejoie, Wewer, Burns, Beck, Doyle, Davis and Hersey.

Boston Latin Seven Plays Mechanic Arts.

The Boston Latin hockey team will cross sticks with Mechanic Arts on the Columbus Avenue Playground this afternoon and Captain Madden expects his boys to win. This will be the first game of the season for the team but the boys are in fine condition as a result of several hard workouts.

Many Good Players in Latin Lineup.

Captain Madden has had close to fifty candidates out for the Boston Latin seven but he expects to have the boys ready to make a very creditable showing this afternoon. Wilson, McIntosh, Captain Jack Madden, Cheney, Kopelman, Martin and Kirkwood are likely to start the game. Lonergan, Devine, Benavid and Montague have been showing up well in practice. Billy Boles, the star athlete at Boston Latin, has not reported for the hockey team as yet, but he is expected to report soon. He will probably win a regular berth when he reports.

Jack Frits Is Coach at Wendell Academy.

Manager Gomberts of the Boston Latin hockey team has several open dates and would like to hear from school teams. A game is pending with the Wendell Academy team of Cambridge. Jack Frits, the former Ridge Technical and later with the Intercolonials and the Pilgrim A. A. hockey team, is coaching the Wendell Academy team.

Milton High to Meet Weymouth Five Today.

The Milton High basketball team will play Weymouth High today at Milton and the boys expect to score another victory as they did last Saturday. George Kelly is playing a whirlwind game at forward for Milton this season and he is likely to develop into one of the best basketball players among the schoolboys.

POWERS MAY COACH HARVARD MEN UNTIL QUINN GETS BACK

WORCESTER, Jan. 15.—J. Fred Powers, coach of the Worcester Academy track team, may be engaged to coach the Harvard runners and field event men during the illness of Coach Quinn. Coach Powers succeeded "Pooch" Donovan as Worcester Academy's track coach. He gained fame by winning the all-round championship of the Amateur Athletic Union, and for several years was one of the most prominent athletes in New England.

Powers has had a long and successful career in amateur athletics. He was for two years captain of the Notre Dame University track team, and both of these years Notre Dame, largely through Powers' points, won the triangular meet from Chicago and Illinois.

JACKSON SIGNS UP WITH THE PILGRIMS

The signed contract of George C. Jackson has arrived at the Pilgrim headquarters from his home in Blum, Tex. Jackson's condition last spring was anything but favorable. He suffered from malaria, being confined to his room at Augusta for several days. He was not in shape all season, although he had periods of feeling "pretty good," but more often he was in a slump. When physically right he is one of the best outfielders in the National League, as well as one of the best base runners.

STORER LEADER IN ACTIVITIES AT CAMBRIDGE

Now that Robert Storer has been elected again of the Harvard varsity football team, the next proposition Harvard has to settle is: Who will be the coach? The captain cannot choose him or create a committee of his personal friends to run football, for there is already a committee, headed by the graduate treasurer and under supervision of Dean Briggs.

This committee settles things, with his consent. It is true, but which requires his presence mainly as a matter of form. When a man is elected captain at Harvard he ceases to be a member of a certain class and because his nomination is approved by Boston society and by the social heads of his class, it is scarcely to be expected that he should take over the major control of the biggest sporting event in the university on that account.

But Bob Storer is a man of very varied activities. He is on the committee for revision of the Harvard Hymnal; one of the junior dance committee, a member of the committee of the Sophomore Institute of 1770, and high in the St. Paul Society. He is sufficiently well known throughout the class to make a fine social leader, which is one of the qualities expected of a football captain.

Storer can get the undergraduates interested in the sport at mass meetings and he knows how to handle himself probably better than any one else on the team. The first that he is not as brilliant a player as some of his mates is not of great importance.

An interesting question has also come up as to what will happen to Storer in case Tudor Gardner, the ex-football hero, who was laid out two years ago in the Harvard-Princeton game, returns to his post and ousts Storer from the position of guard, which Gardner originally held. That would leave Storer without a position, unless he is made varsity centre, which seems the probable solution of the affair.

MELLODY AND BRUSSO IN A FAST BOUT

PUTNAM, Ct., Jan. 15.—Honey Melody of Boston and Noah Brusso of Attleboro, Mass., boxed twelve fast rounds before the Putnam Social and Athletic Club. Brusso had a shade the better of it, although Melody's generalship carried him through several bad places.

FREDERICK, ENGLISH HIGH 1906 HEAD

Over a hundred English High School grads gathered at the table made the seventh annual 1906 class dinner, the largest affair of its kind on record. Grads were rounded up from different parts of the country. Allen R. Frederick was elected president. The festivities took place at the Hotel Thorndike.

GILLISSIE MEETS WOOD TONIGHT

The eighth game for the championship of New England at the White Bear last night was won by Keenan of Providence, R. I., by the score of 125 to 112 by Blakelee. The game tonight will be between Gillissie of Hyde Park and Wood of Pawtucket, R. I.

Ballad of White Hopes

By DAMON RUNYON

I FOUN' a guy one day in a t'own in Ioway,
Thinks I, well, here's an ace;
hope of all the milk-white race;
So I signs him and I calls him Kill'em Willie.
Oh, he cripp'led up Young Groans; he wounded Soldier Jones;
He hammered Warhoot Watkins, and he crushed Mike Mustard's bones—
Sez I, this guy's the gravy, boys, in awed, respectful tones;
And now he knocks 'em dead in vaudeville.

Harvard Seven Meets Toronto in Clash at Arena Tonight

The University of Toronto-Harvard hockey game at the Boston Arena tonight should prove a lively ice battle. It will be the second visit of the Canadians to this city this year, and, although they were defeated when they met the strong B. A. A. team in December, they put up the fastest and best game exhibited by any of the Canadian teams which have played in the Hub this season.

It was not until near the close of the game with B. A. A. that the Uniform seven was able to overcome the lead of its opponent and forge ahead to victory.

Harvard was defeated two weeks ago by Ottawa University, but since that game the Crimson seven has improved, both individually and in teamwork, and the men realize they must win from Toronto in order to stand a chance in their important games with Princeton and Yale, which are fast approaching.

Captain Gardner and Coach Winsor have been instilling a lot of confidence in the members of the team and this has shown its effects in their improved play.

"TED" MEREDITH TO COMPETE IN B. A. A. GAMES

"Ted" Meredith, the wonderful Pennsylvania freshman who broke the world's records for both 800 metres and 880 yards at the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden last Summer, has entered the big B. A. A. meet which will be held next month. This youthful speed king will compete in both the 600 yards and 1,000 yards runs.

Meredith is one of the most famous middle distance runners in the world today. A year ago he was almost unknown, while today his deeds on the cinder path are being discussed by athletic lovers the world over.

The former Mercersburg runner first attracted attention when he ran a quarter mile at the Penn. relay games in less than fifty seconds. He "made" the Olympic team at the tryouts at the Harvard Stadium.

Meredith won the 800-metre race at Stockholm in 1m. 51 9-10s. and continued on to the 880 mile mark when he paced in 1m. 52⅘s. These were both new world's records. He defeated such well known runners as Mel Sheppard, Ira Davenport and Braun of Germany.

WILSON AND FOSS BOTH DONATE CUPS

President-elect Wilson and Governor Foss have donated cups to be contested for at the international snowshoe meet meet which will be held on Marblehead next Summer.

"The Whip"

The story of the play of the same name now being produced in New York.

Copyright, 1912, by Cecil Raleigh and Hamilton by arrangement with the Drury Lane Company of America and Arthur Collins, managing director of the Drury Lane Theatre of London, written from the play.

By BERTRAND BABCOCK.

PART II. (Continued.)

"Who was it?" came from Branchester.

"Sartoris," said Haslam.

"I did the rest," he added in a trembling, low voice, "wrote it in the book—me! Swore to it after—lied! Must fight, for my body—greater for my soul—pity—I confess—forgive and save me."

"Mr. Haslam," said the generous hearted Lady Diana, "you shall be safe with us. Stay with us until the truth is clear and proved."

* * *

It was only a few moments before the great Two Thousand Guinea Race.

In the paddock our friends of Fol comburet were listening to the self-congratulations of Lord Beverley that in spite of all that had been done to prevent The Whip's starting, everything was now in readiness.

In anticipation of the effect the confession of Haslam would have upon the Marquis of Beverley, Lady Diana and the Earl of Branchester were openly strolling together about the paddock, confident and hopeful too that the big race would give Branchester a war fund against his enemies.

In the press in the paddock Captain Sartoris, followed at a little distance by the alert-featured but unfashionably garbed men, met Mrs. D'Aquila.

"It's all right," Sartoris told the woman, forcefully. "You're a clever woman, Nora. The magistrate was a dear old person—most obliging—issued a warrant at once —said he would lock him up, too, if he could not find good bail—of course, he will, and then release him tomorrow."

"I don't particularly care if they bail him tomorrow, as long as you take him today," she said.

"That's sure enough," answered the captain confidently. "The detective-inspector and another chap came down with me. Luckily they don't know Anson by sight, so I have come to look for him, and I shall find him at exactly the right moment."

Kelly, the "King of the Ring," came up to Sartoris at this moment and with him stepped aside.

"Anything to tell me?" he asked in a low tone.

"Only that you can give me the bill if you like," the other responded.

Kelly appeared pleased.

"You've done your best to earn it," he said, "but the job isn't finished, you know."

"It will be very soon," put in the captain quickly. "I told you what I meant to do—the men are here."

"Then hurry up, my lad," the bookmaker told him. "They will be mounted in a minute. Time's short and remember, if The Whip loses the bill and the money's yours, but if The Whip wins it goes to Lady Di. You know what's at stake on the race."

The loud call of the clerk of the course for the entrants to take their places sounded throughout the paddock.

Harry Anson and Tom Lambert appeared leading The Whip.

"We've just saddled, my lady," Lambert said to Lord Beverley's granddaughter. "There goes the bell! Anything to tell, Harry?"

Lady Diana caressed The Whip while she answered:

"Only this—everything that wickedness could do has been done to stop our horse, but she is safe. Now, for the honor of the colors, go and ride your best."

With his hand on the jockey's shoulder the young earl added in the spurring speech of Lady Diana:

"For you're carrying hearts and hopes today as well as fortunes. All England will cheer you when you win, Harry, and I shall be the first to rush up and grip the hand. In a few minutes it will all be over."

"Yes, my lord, all over and"——began Harry.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

This Home-Made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes a pint—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good family-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water and stir 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add Sugar Syrup. This recipe works perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc., or without question the Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Nell Brinkley's Picture Story of "Milestones"

"YOUTH LOVES, AGE FORGETS"

Every thing Sweet and True in "Milestones," Says Nell Brinkley

By NELL BRINKLEY.

"MILESTONES," at the Tremont Theatre, is a beautiful play, beautifully acted, beautifully written, full of beautiful words and beautiful women and beautiful lighting. It reminds me of a golden Nova Scotian apple, so mellow and sweet and sound it is, warmed in sunshine and cooled in dew—which are terms when you're meaning the play. Lovely it is, outside, as yellow satin, delicious all the way through and clean at the core.

It doesn't seem new, this play. Maybe its mellow tone lies in the mild, rich lighting; maybe you find it in its dignified tenor; maybe it calls to you from the lustrous old gowns or is in the changes that come to the square, old drawing room—the one setting of the play, where the decades bring gilt chairs and electric lights, where the little first blonde sweetheart of the story grows grey and querulous and tiny-bodied, and forgets her youth; maybe it grows in the lovely art of the words and the people who say them; and maybe it seems rare and sick low-old because the truth of its story is as ancient as the first man loved and found a mate, made a home for his babies, grew hoary with years and cool of heart and memory and tried to make his girl-child love where he willed, forgetting the old, old heart that once was young and would not go elsewhere but where it leaned! In "Milestones" Youth and Age love one another and never understand. Age is an old donkey, who plants his feet, Youth is a little love who pulls at his bridle and whimpers and persuades. And by a miracle of time this same grey donkey was once a little love pulling and whimpering at a bridle himself; but he has "plum forgot" and so he plants his feet.

I wished for a grandfather and a slip of a maid at "Milestones." Just to watch their faces gleam and lighten. The shine from the stage would have many times glittered on tears in the grandfather's eyes, and deepened the flush on the girl's sleek cheek. But the grandfather's back and brows would have stiffened in sympathy when the stage father smothered his girl-child's "foolish heart affair" and made her marriage for her. And the slip of a maid's lip would have shook and her heart have anguished for the girl who struggled against her folks and lost. "They always forgot they, too, were young," would have whispered the maid in the crinkles of her fan. "Children were obedient when I was young, and girls aren't what they were those days," would have grumbled the grandfather into his big, white waistcoat. And the maid wouldn't have understood, and the grandfather would have lost his memory of his own hot-hearted courtship, and how his sweetheart climbed the garden wall to the circle of his arms. Just so Youth and Age misunderstood and forget in the story of "Milestones."

It's too lovely a story to tell here in a little space. And then too fascinating, too. For if I once begin, why, then I'd wander on and on and make a fine, rare tale of it before I was through.

You'll have to go yourself. There you'll find a great, glowing old drawing room, it, too, where sweethearts love and grow old and forget; where new youth lifts its head and grows old in its turn, too, and forgets, and still new youth of 1912 beats its wings against the wall of Age's loving, hardening heart. You'll see the fair old drawing room change its dress. You'll find pictures—1800, 1885, 1912. You'll find nothing unhealthy. Everything clean and sweet and true, I'm sorry—you'll find a few tears—but there'll be a laugh so quick behind them that they'll never get time to fill up your heart and make it heavy in your breast. Oh, a beautiful, tender, half-jolly, halfsad play it is, and it has an old maid in it, who loved and was young in the first old picture, and who never forgets that she was, then' in the last. Life has some of her kind in it, too.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Discussing Present Day Needs, Says: Beautify Your Home Life Before Trying to Beautify the World

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Publishing Co.

JUST what subjects are worthy of discussion in literature or in print in prose or verse? In newspapers or books?

A score of people questioned on this matter might give a score of answers.

An erudite man of my acquaintance thinks one should write only of classical subjects. He thinks Greek literature and history and mythology hold talent. He believes it is necessary for the uplifting of the taste of the modern man and woman to get wholly away from the sordid present.

A bright youth, on the contrary, abests at this dictum, and says:

"Let's clear away from that highbrow stuff; nobody wants it. It is for old fossils; Homer and Virgil and Shakespeare did it to death. Say something modern; something with red blood in it."

Another believes in allegories; in fairy tales; in the elusive and mystical. "Avoid of all things being obvious," he says, by which he means try and be hard to understand.

Still another says, "Amuse people. Make them laugh. Turn their faces away from the serious side of life. Instead of portraits give them caricatures; instead of life pictures give them cartoons."

One man believes in making fine phrases; he thinks literary talent is simply a brush in the hands of a painter and should be used to make something beautiful and artistic. It does not matter to him what is expressed in a sentence; one idea is as good as another if only it is phrased exquisitely.

Opinions and ideals are lost sight of once the color scheme of words enters his mind.

Home Problems Important

Another would be realistic or nothing. He would lay bare every evil thing in the world with his pen; and then ask the world to come and see, and hope that future generations might cover the unpleasant debris with flower gardens.

A man asked a literary woman why she wasted her time in discussing such themes as love, marriage, home life and rearing of children. There are so many subjects more important, he said.

What are they? asked the lady.

"Well, political matters, reforms, economics, religion, morals, etc.," he replied.

But are these subjects more important than those designated as domestic?

"Politics," Webster tells us, "is the science of government; that part of ethics which has to do with the regulation and government of a nation or State, the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity; the augmentation of its strength and resources, the protection of its citizens in their rights, and the preservation and improvement of their morals."

Now, upon what foundation does a nation rest?

Upon its homes.

The moment the home life of a land is destroyed or undermined that moment the degeneration of the nation begins. We have but to glance back over history to know that. And for what purpose do nations exist? Why do people form a government, bend together in a country?

Merely to establish an order which they believe will be conducive to happy, moral home life.

So it seems to me when I turn my time and talents to any discussion which will help men and women to be better husbands and fathers, wives and mothers, friends and lovers, that I am working wisely for the ultimate welfare of my country.

The same argument applies to reform. Where does all the true reformation begin?

It must begin at home.

The bad husband, the bad father, the bad friend can never institute a lasting reform of humanity.

We have too many shining lights in the political, social and artistic firmaments, who are orbs of darkness in the domestic sky.

Domestic life is the foundation upon which the world of society rests.

And without a firm foundation the most beautiful structure falls.

The critic suggested morals as a topic worthy of discussion in literature.

But what are morals supposed to make?

Not angels, for angels are presumably already moral.

Good men and women are needed in the land today more than angels are needed in Paradise.

Truly Important Topics

Whatever subjects can be discussed that aid men and women to thinking along ways which develop character, and nobility of action; whatever can be written that gives courage to the despondent, hope to the downcast, strength to the weakling, ambition to the indolent, and wakens a sense of responsibility in the idle—these are the important topics of the world in any and every age.

And no man can develop such qualities who is a thoughtless son, an indifferent husband, a miserly citizen and a selfish father.

Men and women must BEGIN TO BE WORTHY WHERE THEY ARE before they can be worthy in any other position in life.

Beautify your home life before you try to beautify the world.

To Develop the Bust

To Beauty Editor: I am so ashamed of my chin bust that I want to ask you if there is any harmless way to develop it. My hips and the rest of my body are right for the present style and I do not want them larger, but my bust is so flat that I would try anything that gave hope of even three or four more inches development. MARY C.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the body, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Hayes Co., Buffalo, N. Y., called Stillman's Cream. It is the discovery of a wonderful specialist whose practice was largely among her own sex, and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send five to the Dr. Hayes Co. Dept. 86 A B Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package in plain wrapper without charge. This is said to be the result of many years of scientific development and the ladies and girls of Buffalo, Rochester and vicinity assure us that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned, the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's cream-lotion made them full and firm. Do not fail to write them, as they will be pleased to send you a free sample of this cream to prove its merits. Neither would I neglect to massage the neck, shoulders or breasts, as they increase the size and limits, and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

OVERCOME HER OBJECTION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a girl of the same age, who also loved me until one week ago. She wrote and told me she was going to stop going with young men and that she had nothing against me. She said she had reasons of her own for doing this.

L. E. W.

A GIRL who loves a man who honestly and sincerely loves her is bound to make him an exception in her resolution to have nothing to do with the men. You have nothing to worry about. If she loves you it will be easy for you to overcome her objections to your sex.

NO HAPPINESS HERE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and for the past two years I have been keeping company with a young gentleman two years my senior. Some time ago, at a dance which I attended, my friend not being there, I allowed another young man to accompany me home. My friend became angry when he heard of it and has not called since. Now I love this young man dearly and am in suspense, how to again obtain my darling's friendship.

ANXIOUS.

HE is jealous to a selfish extreme and would make a tyrannical husband. Think it over candidly. If you make the overtures to a reconciliation will he not be more overbearing than before? Would you not have to make the advances every time?

YOU ALONE MUST DECIDE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-five and in love with a gentleman of the same age. He wishes to marry me, but, being of different religion, I do not know what to do. He is Catholic and I Protestant. Should I turn with him or he turn with me?

THAT is a question you and you alone must decide. However, as her church means more to a woman than to a man, it is the customary thing for the man to yield. But, as I said, that is for you to decide.

CALL ON THE PARENTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When a young man is anxious to meet a young lady and knows no way of being introduced to her, and he flirts with her, she returning the flirtation, is it proper for the young man to introduce himself in this manner of acquaintance or not? How can I arrange to meet her parents so as to let them know the sort of a young man I am?

REGGIE.

A YOUNG man loves a girl he has never met, and knows no way of meeting her. A very commendable way of surmounting the barriers convention puts in his way would be to go boldly to the girl's parents, taking his credentials with him.

Such a way would certainly meet their respect, for it is more honorable than trying to make the girl's acquaintance by street flirtations and meeting her clandestinely.

HE LOVES HIMSELF MORE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man of twenty-one for the last six months, and it's nothing but quarreling every other night. Do you think if he loves me he would do that?

BROKEN-HEARTED.

HE loves his own opinions, his own way and his own perfect self more than he loves you.

Don't, I beg of you, accept attentions from a man so selfish. There is nothing but misery ahead for you if you do.

CERTAINLY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some time ago I was keeping steady company with a young man. For some reason or other he went out of town. I did not hear from him for several months. A few days ago I received a postcard from him. Would you advise me to answer it?

G. A.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

MA had a awful lot of fun with Pa last nite. Pa had just joined a club that he called "The Human Nature Club." Pa told Ma that the only way to belong to a Human Nature Club was to know about Human nature. It is a awful interesting study, sed Pa, knowing the kind of peepul tast is all rite do the kind that isent.

You never was much of a picker of men, sed Ma, it always seemed to me that sitho you had been a whole lot around you picked out sum of the queerest men for world beaters that I have ever saw. Doant you remember that little fellow that sed he had climed Mount McKinley, & how you had entertained him, & how you found out at last that the Mount McKinley that he climed was a little hill thick of Cook's Falls?

Yes, sed Pa, I remember that all rite, but that fellow was about the only man that ever fooled me in my judgment of human nature. I have always made it a point, sed Pa, to kind of sum-like a man, to look him over from the ground up, as it was, & that is why I have made only one mistake up to date.

Is that so? sed Ma. Doant you remember the grocer that you sed was the type of a man that wud sell you the best of everything that he had for almost nothing? Doant you reemember how you had him cum to yure home, believing, as you did, that you wud git all the fresh eggs you wanted? I guess you got sum fresh eggs, dident you? sed Ma. You only thought you was gitting fresh eggs You & yure knowledge of human nature give me many a merry laff, sed Ma. You know so much about human nature, sed Ma, that you wuddent know the differns be-tween a Tammany man & a Prohibitionist.

Well, sed Pa, maybe I doant know as much as sum of my friends, but I want to tell you one thing, that is this: There is a man cumming here tonite, sed Pa, that will tell you & litte Bobbie more about human nature than you ever dreemed of knowing. You doant think, I hoap, sed Pa, that this is my joke? Not by any meens. Why, sed Pa, this man of wich I am speeking of knows so much about human nature that he cud tell the differns between a gun man & a man that never dared to be a gun man. You jest wait till he cums over here to the house, sed Pa, he will make you feel as if you wanted to be a member of the Human Nature Club.

Jest then Pa's frend blew in. Pa told me that I never shud say "blue in," beekuss Pa dosent like slang, & beekuss he does my Ma. But anyhow Pa's frend must have been feeling prity good, beekuss after he had ate everything there was to eat he reecited this is what he reesite:

What's the grandest thing on erth?
Human Nature!
Trust in it for all you're worth,
Human Nature.
Then, wen you have done your best,
When there's pride within yure breast,
Drink this toast to one swell guest—
Human Nature!
Wunderful, sed Pa.
I dount think so, sed Ma.

The Moor

By LEON GRAY

OH, the moor is a-calling me,
I must go back again,
For the heather's smiling purple, dear,
As sea betwixt the rain;
The grass is holding emerald arms,
The bracken mourns alone,
And the evening stars are beckoning
From a land that is my own.

Oh, the fern-bung hills are seeking me
For shelter on their breast,
The moss is whispering thro' the dusk
And bids me come and rest;
All human ways can't hold me back
From heather, tree and stone,
And the love that's on the moor
For the land that is my own.

Stock Prices; Financial News

Stock markets were stronger on the whole in early trading today, although in Boston prices were irregular. Locally copper issues were helped by the substantial advance of metal in the London warrants market. Among issues to advance during the first hour were Granby, North Butte, Lake and Calumet, and Hecla.

Concerning the metal price it was said here today: "Calumet and Hecla people tell their friends that they are holding Calumet & Hecla brands at 18 cents, and are selling no "subsidiary" copper at less than 17¾ cents, and that sales are being made at these figures right along."

The First National Bank says in its January letter: "Nineteen-twelve was easily the best year in a decade in point of volume of business. Nevertheless, New England business men generally are expecting later on in the year a slowing up of business. It should not be understood that business men are going ahead with their 1913 plans without regard to tariff revision. Restriction in future orders is marked in textile lines, notably the woolen industry. This is not being done because of the fear that 1913 as a whole looks unattractive, but simply because a downward revision of the tariff involves a new and lower range of prices.

New York Stronger at Start.

"A vigorous demand from strong interests" for stocks is said to have caused the improvement in the New York market at the opening. Most of the important issues sold higher. Canadian Pacific was strong here and abroad. In New York it sold ex-rights to subscribe for new stock at 242 and then rose to 242¾ against 258¼ yesterday. Subscription rights have ruled for some time around 15 per cent.

Union Pacific was active. It opened with a half point gain and then lost most of it.

The copper stocks were firm. Amalgamated was ½ higher and American Smelting, after opening ⅝ lower, recovered and gained ¼. Among the declines were Western Maryland ½, Southern Railway ¼, Republic Iron & Steel ⅛, American Sugar ¼ and National Biscuit ⅜.

Atlantic Coast Line was strong, advancing 1 point. Other gains included Wisconsin Central ½, Steel Common 1⅛, Utah Copper 1⅛, New York Central ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅛, California Petroleum ⅛, American Car & Foundry ⅛, Anaconda Copper ⅜, Distillers Securities ⅜, Mexican Petroleum ⅞ and Louisville & Nashville ¼.

The Curb was steady.

When the Lazard Freres engaged $2,000,000 in gold in New York today for shipment to Europe tomorrow, it brought the total of yellow metal exports during the present movement up to $5,000,000.

The New York sub-treasury lost $441,000 to the banks yesterday and has lost $7,202,000 since Friday.

During early trading the London market became firmer and American stocks made gains over New York parity. Canadian Pacific was a strong issue. In financial circles there it is believed that the threat of Balkan allies to resume fighting is a bluff.

Big Business Pilloried.

B. C. Forbes wrote today: "Financial nerves were yesterday a-tremble. Will Mr. Wilson, not only for the sake of justice, but to avert possible unpleasantness, please impress upon the country that labor unions have been guilty of shortcomings, that politicians have abused their trusts, that municipal governments have not all been clean, that small importers as well as the big have defrauded the treasury, that corner grocers have been guilty of short-weighing, that milk sellers have not always been above reproach, that the majority (two-thirds) of all railway accidents are attributable to employes, that the practice of cheating the customs has been indulged in by all classes of travellers—that, in fact, Big Business is not the only spot on the American sun?

"Big Business is being held up to scorn so fiercely and unrelentingly that the public mind may be inflamed to a greater pitch than even the most radical reformer, short of anarchists, could desire. The people are daily told of the misdeeds of capital, but not one word has come from the same quarter as to the shortcomings of labor trusts or labor leaders. The only sinners, one would gather, are those in the business world, and the rest of the population are being incited to revolt against their black-painted tyrannies. This fosters a 'holier than thou' feeling that breeds hatred and worse."

Copper Higher in London.

The London copper metal market became stronger today and spot and futures each opened 17s. 6d. higher.

The spot price was then equivalent to seventeen cents a pound for electrolytic. Some metal was bought by consumers in London this morning, it is reported. But there was no business, so far as has been learned, on this side of the ocean. Producers said, however, that they expected to effect sales later in the day.

Domestic consumers do not intend to buy any more than is absolutely necessary until they learn that the price of the metal has gone to the lowest notch. One statement regarding the situation reads: "The copper market has gone back to the competitive conditions which prevailed before an agreement to hold out for a uniform price was reached last June."

A recent statement was that big brass concerns in Connecticut had recently bought all their January and February supplies. It was said today by one who has been found consistently accurate: "The brass companies, which are the largest consumers of copper in the world, have not bought a pound this week so far as could be ascertained, but in defence of this apparent non-interest on their part it may be said that they have already contracted for their January and February requirements."

Financial News in Brief.

"No doubt," it was said in New York this morning, "a considerable share of the decline in stocks was due to short selling, but the general observation was there was at least an equal amount of voluntary liquidation."

Standard Oil shares had sensational rises yesterday, led by Atlantic Refining Company stock, which rose 40 points to 690, but subsequently lost 20 points of the gain. Standard Oil of New Jersey advanced 12 points, but fell back 9 in the late trading. Other former subsidiaries of the Oil Trust were inclined to weakness, owing to the break on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Texas & Pacific for the year ended June 30 last reports a surplus of $964,278 after all charges. Deduction of improvements and new equipment, however, left a deficit of $384,768, lowering a total surplus to $282,584.

W. R. Lawson, London financial correspondent for Hearst newspapers, cables regarding the situation there: "President-elect Wilson's anti-monopoly speech is exciting uneasiness. It recalls the fact that Democratic administrations have been invariably unlucky for the American stock markets."

Mild weather this Winter has reduced the operating costs of railroads greatly.

The wage raise for United States Steel Corporation employes amounts to $12,000,000 a year and is about half as much as was paid out in dividends last year. Laborers, who are the poorest paid class, will benefit the most. The corporation has in all about 200,000 employes.

The last slump in the stock market brought the latter to within three-eighths of a point of the low price of February, 1912, as measured by the average quotation of fifty leading issues.

It is understood that Isle Royale profits for 1912 amounted to more than $500,000. It is said that the total surplus on the last day of December was $768,000 It is expected that the initial dividend will be declared at the meeting of directors on January 30

WIRE AUTO WHEELS MUCH IN EVIDENCE AT NEW YORK SHOW

By J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Wire wheels are very much in evidence at the big automobile show. A dozen or more manufacturers have placed them on their cars as regular equipment, while others are making this type of wheel optional with the buyer. The dealers are inclined to think that the wire wheel is for a faddist, but the far-seeing manufacturers state that with the scarcity of wood the wire wheel will be the automobile wheel of the future, as it is more resilient than the wooden wheel and stronger.

Cars like the National, Stutz, Keeton and Pathfinder have the wire wheels on cars in their display at the show. Other equally as well known cars also offer them as optional equipment.

The silent Knight engine is attracting just as much interest as the first year the sliding sleeve motor was placed on exhibition at the New York show. This year the Stearns exhibition, with a stripped chassis showing the Knight engine, and a Knight engine in full working order with all of the parts exposed, has a big crowd around it at all times.

This Stearns is showing its six-cylinder Knight for the first time. It is equipped with Gray & Davis lighting and starting motor, and aside from the sliding sleeve motor the car is one of the nobbiest in the show.

At the Stearns Booth.

J. L. MacAlman, the Boston distributor of this line, is on the job at the Stearns booth, and today was very busy explaining the six-cylinder motor to a number of Bostonians who journeyed here for the purpose of inspecting this particular car.

Four cars are shown in the exhibit of the White Company, the feature of the exhibit being a luxurious limousine of the Berline type, embodying the White six-cylinder, sixty horse-power chassis.

J. S. Hathaway, manager of the Boston branch of the White Company, has arranged to feature this model at the Boston show also. Like the White 30 and 40 the Berline is built with the White electrical starting and lighting systems, and it has a number of characteristics which compelled the attention of the New York show visitors.

The Keeton car, which is manufactured in Canada and also in Detroit, and which had the distinction of being the first American car to be exhibited at the importers' show, is attracting a lot of attention at the Grand Central Palace. The car is distinctly of foreign appearance, with the radiator set in front of the dash, with a sloping hood of Renault type. It has a long wheel base and all the appearances of a roomy, powerful car.

Bill Doane, who is widely known in the New England trade, has secured the agency of this car in New England and will open a retail salesroom in Boston. He is planning for space at the Boston show.

Another display at Grand Central Palace that looks good to the motor fans is that of the "Mighty" Michigan. With the exception of a powerful, natty, distinctive roadster, the other models that are displayed have been running around the streets of Boston for some time.

Walter E. Burke and W. G. Cook, who are distributing this line in New England, are on the job and have placed a number of agencies since the show opened.

The Pathfinder exhibit in the Grand Central Palace is unique. A wine-colored racy type roadster of a decidedly freakish design catches the eye of a man who wants something different in design. The body is cigar shaped.

The Martha Washington coupe is another feature of this exhibit. Frank H. Parker, who is well known in Boston, is the New England factory representative for this line, and expects to close a Boston agency before the show is over.

A four-passenger coupe with the panels covered with cane is the big feature of the Oakland exhibit at the Garden. The big seat in back will accommodate three. The seats on either side extend out several inches from the one in the middle. There is another seat in the front of the coupe.

Manager Fred Walsh and Sales Manager Briggs of the Boston branch who are here are very enthusiastic over the Oakland line. All of the various models are exhibited and the display seems to be attracting a lot of attention.

The Marmon exhibit in the Garden includes their six and four-cylinder cars. Frank Wing, who made this car so popular in New England, is at the exhibit, meeting New England motorists. Some of the features of the construction in both models are a force-fed oiling through a hollow crank shaft, floating axles, two-spark ignition, left steering centre control, electric starting and electric lighting.

Messrs. Connell and McCone of Boston, the Massachusetts distributors of the Overland, joined the sales forces at the Overland exhibit in the Garden today. There is a full line of Overland models on exhibition, and the usual crowd of agents from New England are here.

Attractive Winton Display.

The Winton display, which is just inside the main entrance of Madison Square Garden, is, as usual, one of the most attractive exhibits of the show. There is a full line of the Winton Models on display. F. A. Hinchcliffe has been in attendance since the show opened.

The Flanders Six is on exhibition in the Garden, and by the automobile trade in general this car has got a pretty careful inspection, as most everybody in the industry wanted to see what Flanders turned out in the shape of a "Six." Right next to this exhibit is the Maxwell display. All the models are left drive, with centre control. Instead of being known as the Special, this year's model will be known as the "Maxwell 40." Ralph Coburn, with the manager of the Maxwell Motor Car Company, is here.

Fred Lucas, the Boston representative of the Pope-Hartford cars, is very much in evidence at the exhibit of this line in the Garden. The three models that this company are turning out for 1913 are displayed here.

The Hoffecker speedometer, which is made in Boston, has an exhibit in Madison Square Garden, and the sales force has been mighty busy taking orders. There are several cars using this instrument as a part of their regular equipment, and Sales-manager Edward Vail states that before the show season is over he will have a half-dozen contracts from big motor car concerns who will place the Hoffecker on their cars as regular equipment. Wilfred Creighton, who used to be one of the "Warner twins," but is now selling Hoffeckers, arrived at the show, with a big batch of Canadian contracts.

At Grand Central Palace the Velie Company are exhibiting the Velie Special, Velie 40, Velie 45 and a striped chassis. Manager Fred Bradfield of the Boston branch and Jim Coggeshall are here.

PUNCH POKES FUN AT THE PRESIDENT

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Punch this week publishes a cartoon on President Taft's arbitration speech entitled "His Swan Song." It represents Mr. Taft as a dying swan, singing the following to the American eagle dressed in the Stars and Stripes:

Arbitration I adore;
Sometimes less and sometimes more.
If you love your dying swan,
Keep it up when he is gone.

If You Leave Your Little Pigs Unprotected Don't Blame the Bear

And if You Leave Your Citizens at the Mercy of Big Money Men, Don't Blame Morgan or the Other Big Money Bears. PROTECT YOURSELVES, Then You Will DESERVE Protection.

Copyright, 1913, by American Journal-Examiner

You read in the papers that Mr. Morgan "revealed his money power." It was an interesting revelation. Mr. Morgan has handled in ten years two thousand million dollars' worth of stocks and bonds.

When Mr. Morgan or any other big financial individual "handles" anything, he keeps part of what he handles.

Is it any wonder Mr. Morgan is able to buy pictures for one hundred thousand dollars apiece, or one million dollars apiece, if he chooses, when he handles two thousand millions of dollars in ten years and charges "so much" for the handling?

You learned also that Mr. Morgan just at present has a little matter of $162,000,000 in his banking house awaiting investment. He has that much on hand, in case anybody should come along and want a little money to put into some sort of business of the kind that Mr. Morgan approves.

We don't propose to waste your time with criticism of Mr. Morgan. He and the other big money men do exactly WHAT THE PEOPLE LET THEM DO.

If you were a farmer, and left your little pigs roaming around the edge of the woods, you would be foolish to blame the bear that came out and ate the pigs.

The thing to do is to look after your pigs, when you happen to be a farmer living near bears.

The thing for the people of this country to do is to look after themselves and their interests, when there are large financial bears on the edge of the woods.

What the people need is money for useful construction, easily obtained, on proper security, and for use in SMALL ways.

Do not imagine that Mr. Morgan has been a useless individual, in his handling of two thousand millions of dollars.

Do not believe that the one hundred and sixty-two millions that he now holds will be used uselessly or foolishly.

Morgan, perhaps, will make too much. But that doesn't matter very much. In a few years from now, there won't be any Morgan, and his personal profits won't count.

Mr. Morgan has built many miles of railroads, or enabled men to get the money to build them.

He has built great factories—the steel factory at Gary alone represents nearly one hundred millions of wise investment.

As a man in a big way, Mr. Morgan is a useful proposition. He charges a great deal, he makes more than a man should have, but he does promote a big business.

The trouble with us Americans is that our LITTLE people have no chance.

Our little people's savings are used by the big people in their operations, or swallowed up in watered stocks and get-rich-quick schemes.

Two thousand millions can be borrowed by the BIG men from one big man—and the little man can't borrow ANYTHING.

The farmer, if he wants to borrow, must pay 8%—which is criminal usury. The banks all know it, and they think it is all right.

From those same banks Mr. Morgan can borrow at 3% or less. Or he can borrow money from the Government FOR NOTHING AT ALL. HE CAN GET GOVERNMENT FUNDS DEPOSITED IN HIS BANK, THEN THE BANK LENDS THEM OUT FOR THE HIGHEST RATE.

The little man must pay usury, and what is more often the case, HE CAN'T GET MONEY ON ANY TERMS.

In Germany, where they haven't one-quarter of our wealth, but several times our national intelligence, the little people have been able to borrow from the Government five thousand millions of dollars at 4%—every cent spent for little improvements.

In this country, if the farmer wants to tile a wet field, drain it, and make it productive for the benefit of all; if he wants a new barn, new agricultural machinery, he must pay usury, as though he were taking his watch to a pawnbroker—and he usually cannot GET the money when he wants it.

We have millions and thousands of millions for Wall Street investment, for buying stocks and selling them on margin.

The professional gambler of the Stock Exchange can get all the money that he wants on call—usually at 3%. The farmer who is trying to feed the people, the builder who is trying to erect homes, the man who wants to build a house in which to keep his family, cannot borrow at all, or only at usurious rates.

We need common sense in this country, co-operation by the citizens, and voting by the citizens for their own protection.

And especially we need to give to the small man, who is in reality THE UNITED STATES, the opportunity to borrow at a fair rate the money that he needs to spend for the general welfare in CONSTRUCTIVE work.

There is no use talking about Morgan and the other big men. They do, as we have said, WHAT YOU LET THEM DO.

The real big man, the real rich man in the United States, IS THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT, and YOU are the United States Government.

Why don't the people get together, arrange methods of lending money direct by the nation or by the State to the individual for constructive work, give to the farmer, the small builder and the honest citizen generally the credit to which he is entitled?

ONE individual able to handle two thousand millions of dollars in ten years, and eighty MILLIONS of individuals hampered for lack of credit and bled by usury—it is a picture that does little credit to the intelligence of the United States of America.

Mother's Talks vs. Mother's Pies—It Is the Former That Guide When We Reach Life's Cross Roads.

By DOROTHY DIX

A MAN recently made the statement that it is a pity we don't remember mother's talks as long as we do mother's pies.

Ah, but we do! The thing that we remember longest on earth, that makes us what we are, that is part and parcel of what we call character, is the memory of what mother said to us.

In the great crises of life we don't stop to reason. We act on impulse, and the thing that decides us is not the wisdom, nor the learning, nor the philosophy that we have acquired in our maturer years. It is the principles that have been bred in us, the ideals that have been grounded in us in our childhood.

It is the memory of some talk we have had with our mothers in a solemn twilight; it is the memory of old songs sung above us in our cradle; of whispered prayers by our bedside; of tales of high and heroic daring that have been our mother's bedside stories that give us the courage and the strength to stand up and do a man's or a woman's part in the world.

Or else it is the memory of a mother's whining and complaints; of the false standards she inculcated in us; of her envy, and greed, and selfishness that makes us weaklings in our hour of temptation, so that we choose the easiest way.

Importance of Mother's Talks Cannot Be Overestimated.

Just as our mother's pies give us physical nourishment or dyspepsia, so our mother's talks give us the big, broad, sane outlook on life, or leaves us poor, bilious, jaundiced, disgruntled creatures. Many a child's morals are wrecked by its mother's conversation.

The importance of a talk that a child has with its mother is something that cannot be overestimated, and the pity of it is that mothers do no realize this, and that they do not take the time and the trouble to have more real heart-to-heart talks with their little ones, and to keep the conversation of the home at a high level.

Scientists tell us that up to the age of ten, eighty per cent. of the impressions that are made on a child's mind are permanent ones. Practically everything that little Johnnie or little Susie, playing about your knee, are hearing they will carry through life with them. They are human phonographs that will go repeating your ideas, your thoughts, your sentiments for the next forty or fifty years. How vital then that they shall hear only the things worth while!

Yet the woman who considers it almost a religious duty to properly sterilize the children's milk bottles never bothers to sterilize her conversation. Nothing would induce her to feed her little ones on unclean food, swarming with bacteria, but she doesn't hesitate to let their eager, hungry little minds gorge themselves on putrid gossip that is alive with suggestions that will poison their souls.

Mothers bandy about a lying old proverb that says that "what goes in at one ear of a child comes out at the other." But this is not true. What goes in at a child's ears lodges there and germinates, and at last flowers into action, good or bad. As a very small example of this take merely a child's grammar. All children that are decently dressed look very much alike. You couldn't hazard a guess from the appearance of a dozen little Buster Brown boys or Peter Thompson girls if you met them away from their parents as to what sort of people they came from.

But talk to them, and in two minutes you have the family pedigree. You know whether they belong to educated and cultivated families or to ignorant ones; you know even the family's outlook on life. The child's grammar, his choice of words and phrases, his attitude toward other children, whether he is envious or snobbish or gentle and courteous and considerate, till you absolutely know exactly what sort of a mother he has and the kind of conversation he is in the habit of hearing at home.

If a little girl never hears her mother talk of anything but clothes and fashion and social climbing, can you wonder that she grows up to think that those things are the most important things in the world and the objects most to be striven for?

If a little girl hears her mother and father continually quarreling and hurling hideous recriminations at each other, can anybody expect her to grow up with any high ideals of married life? Isn't she really forordained for the divorce court by her mother's precepts?

On the contrary, if a little girl hears nothing from her mother's lips but high and noble thoughts; if she hears her mother talk about the beauty and the strength that come from self-sacrifice and devotion to duty; if she hears her mother constantly giving utterance to liberal views, is it not as sure as anything can humanly be that such a little girl will grow up to be a big, broad-minded woman who will bless the world as long as she lives in it?

It Is Mother's Talks, Not Mother's Pies, That Remain with Us.

We are always being called upon to mingle our tears with those of some mother whose son has gone astray and brought disgrace and sorrow upon her. I wonder if it isn't the mother's talk that ninety-nine times out of a hundred has started the boy on the wrong road?

How can that woman who brags of the souvenirs she has stolen from hotels and restaurants blame her son when he turns out a thief? How can the woman who thinks it clever to relate how she cheats her husband by getting money from the tradesman that is charged on the bills as merchandise be surprised when her son falsifies his accounts? How can the mother whose talk has all been of expediency and not of right expect her son to have rock-bound principles?

It is mother's talks, and not mother's pies, that stays by us through life. It's mother's talks that we remember when we stand at the cross-roads and we take the straight and narrow path or the broad downward highway, according as we recollect the directions she has given us.

A SUBURBANITE'S WAIL

By MINNA IRVING

I AM a poor suburbanite,
There is no rest for me;
I have to shovel tons of snow
When Winter strips the tree;
And balmy Spring no leisure brings
To rove in flowery meads—
I've got to plant the garden then
And keep away the weeds.

The drowsy Summer sees me still
A slave from dawn to dawn;
The hammock woos me after tea,
But I must mow the lawn;
And Autumn, idling in the sun
Among her golden sheaves,
Still finds me toiling with a rake
And busy burning leaves.
